Correction to: Medicinal plants used by women in Mecca: urban, Muslim and gendered knowledge

Afnan Alqethami1,2*, Julie A. Hawkins1 and Irene Teixidor-Toneu1

Correction

Additional file

Additional file 1: Comprehensive inventory of the plants listed by women in Mecca including the scientific name and family, whether the plant is found in the Flora of Saudi Arabia and whether it is used as a food or spice, vernacular name(s), part(s) used, therapeutic use categories, preparation, administration, toxicity and side effects, frequency of citation, and Smith's S. For presence or absence in the Flora of Saudi Arabia, Y = yes, N = no; and for food and/or spice use, F = food and S = spice. Plants not documented in the selected literature are marked with *.
