I. INTRODUCTION

The climate in northern Guangdong is mainly tropical and subtropical monsoon climate with high temperature and rainy summer. The terrain is mainly mountains and hilly, which is very suitable for the growth of tea trees. In the collective work, in order to adjust the physical strength and create a production atmosphere, tea farmers will sing folk Tea-leaf Picking songs randomly to reduce the pressure of work, which were gradually formed as Tea-leaf Picking Opera in northern Guangdong after years of development, and was spread to Shaoguan, Meizhou and Qingyuan etc.

Tea-leaf Picking Opera in northern Guangdong is one of the earliest Hakka Tea-leaf Picking Operas in China, the performing art featured by "Sanzi" embodies the production and life interests of the Hakka people, which is very popular within publics in Hakka areas and is an important part of Hakka culture of Lingnan. In this paper, the artistic characteristics, existence and inheritance of "Sanzi" of Hakka Tea-leaf Picking Opera in northern Guangdong will be explored and analyzed.

II. PERFORMANCE STYLE OF "SANZI" ART

Hakka Tea-leaf Picking Opera in northern Guangdong has developed from local opera, now it has profound history and culture and rich artistic expression. The highest level of drama aesthetics is not the beauty of realism, but the beauty of artistic conception. However, the beauty of artistic is not absolute. In the virtual space of the stage, "the virtual" is conditional. For example, horses can be virtual but whips cannot be. Ships can be virtual, oars cannot be. Wine can be virtual, cups cannot be. Compared with other sister operas, Tea-leaf Picking Opera has much more artistic conception, and this unique art has been concluded by predecessor as "Sanzi" art. The so-called "Sanzi", that is "Buzi", "Xiuzi", "Shanzi", is the highly development of formal beauty and the most flexible use of virtual space, "transfer the reality to virtuality" and "transfer the specification to abstraction". In order to realize the easy dissemination, teaching, understanding and remembering, the senior artists have compiled the "jargon" of Sanzi" art into the "Sanzi" proverb after carefully refining.

A. "Buzi" Proverb

The full name of "Buzi" of Tea-leaf Picking Opera is "Aizibu". Aizibu can be divided as "Gaozhuangbu", "Zhongzhuangbu", and "Dizhuangbu".

1) Gaozhuang proverb: Stepping the Gaozhuang with high gait, looking straight ahead, bending knee like hook, straightening the waist like a gun, the spoken parts should be displayed with cross step, the cross means the way to all sides, happiness is displayed with three-step running, and the drunk gait should be stumble along.

2) Zhongzhuang proverb: Middle gait is not low or high, relaxing the shoulders and waist, the actor should perform like the large road is rough and jump when come across the small road, step on to the even road freely, and tell stories with slow gaits and tenderness, cross the bridge with horizontal steps, lift the hips when carrying items.

3) Dizhuang proverb: Horsing riding steps is used in Dizhuang, the body should be much shorter when climbing.

Shaoguan social science planning project in 2019 "study on the translation of classical opera into English based on functional approaches — a brief discussion on Liao Yan's plays and their translation" (Z2019007).
actors should boggle the legs in darkness, display the cat-like gait as stepping on the cotton, display the duck-like gait by looking around, perform the upset with mouse-like step, and perform the peaceful mind with rabbit-like step, squat down like a Buddha, constrict the waist and abdomen, and sink suction and make the waist hard, tight the legs.

All of "Aizibu", whether it is "Gaozhuang", "Zhongzhuang" or "Dizhuang", should take advantage of using the breath. The Bufa of "Aizibu" is connect with Shenfa, using the breath, relaxing the shoulders, turning around by legs, turning over by waist, actors can be drunk but the horse cannot, actors can be dizzy but the ship cannot, it is said in the proverb: standing like the legs of a horse, swinging like a dog's tail, swimming like a snake swimming in river, walking lightly as a ghost in night.

B. "Xiuizi" Proverb

The sleeves of the role of Chou in Tea-leaf Picking Opera hav distinctive feature, compared with its sister operas, the "Xiuizi" Kongfu of Tea-leaf Picking Opera is much more offbeat. The short "Xiuizi" in Tea-leaf Picking Opera is like "having sleeves is like having no sleeves", the long one can down to the ground. The actors (Male Chou) of Tea-leaf Picking Opera perform with a single long sleeve, which is called as "Single Shuixiu" by artists There dozens of performing styles of "Single Shuixiu" like "Throwing", "Withdrawing", "Grabbing", "Swing", "Turning", "Putting" etc. The prima role of Chou depends on "Sing Shuixiu" to describe the figures, which has played a great artistic effect in shaping images. The outstanding performance of "Single Shuixiu" has deepened the comedy color of Tea-leaf Picking Opera, which run through Tea-leaf Picking songs and dances. The most special point is that in Tea-leaf Picking Opera, "Sanzi" is "universal props":

- Replacing pigtails when driving cattle, replacing boat tracker when taking ship, replacing flower hoop when embroidering, replacing cone trip when stitching shoes, taking as straw hat in sunshine day, taking as umbrella in rainy day, taking as handle when pushing vehicle, putting fans on shoulders when carrying the sedan chair, putting fans in fields when planting the seedlings, taking fans as sickle when harvesting rice.
- Using as tea basket when picking tea, using as tea plate when drinking tea, using as knife when cutting vegetables, using as spatula when making dishes, using as musket when hunting birds and using as fishing rob when catching frog.

There are many kinds of "Sanzi" on the opera stage, such as folding fan, moon-shaped fan, feather fan, palm fan; palm-leaf fan etc., while there is only one type of fan in Tea-leaf Picking Opera, "colored fan". In the performance of Tea-leaf Picking Opera, "Fan flower", "Fan dance" take much place. The predecessor are very strict about "Sanzi Kongfu", taking it as an important standard to measure the skills of an actor, therefore, there is a "formula" used by senior artistic to guide the apprentices to practice Sanzi Kongfu:

- If one wants to learn to be proficient, one must practice Shanzi Kongfu, putting fans away when reading the spoken parts, completely opening the fan when dancing, covering faces with fans when there is dust, shaking fans to get cool breeze, throwing fans in hands when especially happy, putting fans in hand when feeling sad, carrying fans on back when looking down, building a pergola with fans while looking out,

C. "Sanzí" Proverb

"Sanzí" Is a common prop. The ways of using fans in common operas are decided by the specific feature, age, status, profession and appearance of the figure (that is Shanzi Kongfu), such as "Wenxiong", "Wudu" means that Wensheng often put fans on their chest, while Wusheng often put fans in front of stomach. The formula for using fans is: on the stage, Laosheng hang fans down to their hips; Hualian put fans close to their faces; Xiaoasheng swing fans before their sleeves; Emperors slap their fans before their chest.

However, there is no Sheng, Dan, Jing, Mo, and no more emperors, scholar and beauty in Tea-leaf Picking Opera. There are one Chou and two Dans in Tea-leaf Picking Opera, who always have the fans in their hands. Fans are very important in Tea-leaf Picking Opera, which run through Chuang, Zuo, Nian, Da, and Wu. It is not only the supporting point of figure but also is the important support of Tea-leaf Picking songs and dances. The most special point is that in Tea-leaf Picking Opera, "Sanzi" is "universal props":

- Replacing pigtails when driving cattle, replacing boat tracker when taking ship, replacing flower hoop when embroidering, replacing cone trip when stitching shoes, taking as straw hat in sunshine day, taking as umbrella in rainy day, taking as handle when pushing vehicle, putting fans on shoulders when carrying the sedan chair, putting fans in fields when planting the seedlings, taking fans as sickle when harvesting rice.
- Using as tea basket when picking tea, using as tea plate when drinking tea, using as knife when cutting vegetables, using as spatula when making dishes, using as musket when hunting birds and using as fishing rob when catching frog.

There are many kinds of "Sanzí" on the opera stage, such as folding fan, moon-shaped fan, feather fan, palm fan; palm-leaf fan etc., while there is only one type of fan in Tea-leaf Picking Opera, "colored fan". In the performance of Tea-leaf Picking Opera, "Fan flower", "Fan dance" take much place. The predecessor are very strict about "Sanzi Kongfu", taking it as an important standard to measure the skills of an actor, therefore, there is a "formula" used by senior artistic to guide the apprentices to practice Sanzi Kongfu:
making fans fly up and down like a butterfly and wave like a tornado, and there will be no good result of art if the Shanzi Kongfu is not good.

- Using fan without seeing it, taking fan just like there is no fan, old Chou flaps beard with fan, young Chou flaps chest with fan, Dan flaps hair near ear with fan, matchmaker flaps hips with fan.

The "Sanzi" matching style of Tea-leaf Picking Opera, "Buzi", "Xiuzi", "Shanzi", forms a whole set of situated actions with rules. The organic combination of dancing actions of “Sanzi” has laid the artistic characteristics of Tea-leaf Picking Opera, and is the perfect performing style of it, which are the specialty and value of Tea-leaf Picking Opera that is different from other operas. Putting sham to truth, taking virtuality to reality, and using form to display expression in Tea-leaf Picking Opera are used to highlight the essence of artistic conception in virtual space, it is not easy to write and play this opera well without these items.

III. THE DEVELOPMENT AND EXISTENCE CRISIS OF HAKKA TEA-LEAF PICKING OPERA IN NORTHERN GUANGDONG

A. The Development of Hakka Tea-leaf Picking Opera in Northern Guangdong

On May 20, 2006, Tea-leaf Picking Opera in northern Guangdong was listed as the intangible cultural heritage of the first batch approved by the State Council. The author's project team members went to Shaoguan downtown, Wonyuan, Nanxiong, etc. to investigate the tea operas, and knew that the local governments and party organization took the development of Tea-leaf Picking Opera as an important affair of constructing the culture and socialist spiritual civilization, which built a good political environment for the existence and development of Tea-leaf Picking Opera.

In addition, Wang Shaoming mentioned that the government has invested a lot of human and material resources and financial resources when Tea-leaf Picking Opera is facing difficulties. In fact, in order to overcome the talent crisis, the Municipal Bureau of Culture and Tea-leaf Picking Opera Theatre did take the way of first investment, but the reality is that the policy support and financial support given by the government and all sectors of society are far from to maintain the continuity of talent training, and far from to build a virtuous circle for the cultivation of talents of Tea-leaf Picking Opera. The strength of government support is not continuous, and the results are bound to be poor.

B. Existence Crisis of Hakka Tea-leaf Picking Opera in Northern Guangdong

In the past more than ten years, Hakka Tea-leaf Picking Opera in northern Guangdong has won a lot of awards in music creation and performance. Like other national traditional arts, the traditional art of Tea-leaf Picking Opera also faces the inheritance dilemma of talent shortage and market shrinkage. Although from the perspective of political conditions, this opera has received the full support of the government, creating a good political ecological environment for the existence and development of Tea-leaf Picking Opera. In general, under the impact of the market tide, Tea-leaf Picking Opera falls into the paradox of development. In terms of the development of Tea-leaf Picking Opera Theater, it faces a shortage of talents and a shrinking market. The first is the lack of creative talents. According to the investigation, there are less than 30 people engaged in the compilation and research of Tea-leaf Picking Opera in Shaoguan at present, and even fewer of them are creators and excellent composers. According to the interview, there are very few and non-professional people who create Tea-leaf Picking Opera in each county of Shaoguan city.

Most of the actors are middle-aged and elderly. No college students are willing to go to the mountainous areas to engage in this sluggish cultural cause.

Secondly, one of the reasons why the actors are out of touch is that they don't play a role the education industry. There are few young people who apply the drama major in this area. There is no Tea-leaf Picking Opera major in many colleges and universities. Because there is no systematic training, it mainly depends on the Chuan, Bang, Dai by the senior actors; the final impact is that the audience can hardly hear the real original singing of Tea-leaf Picking Opera.

Thirdly, the market is shrinking. Under the situation that postmodern music is popular all over the country and even the world, traditional art is also developing passively. At present, the equipment of Tea-leaf Picking Opera tends to be obsolete and out of date. Because the achievements of drama are slow, the interests are small, but the investment is very large, it is difficult to open a market.

IV. INHERITANCE STRATEGIES OF HAKKA TEA-LEAF PICKING OPERA IN NORTHERN GUANGDONG

More elements of it will be integrated into radio and television, news, art advertisement, which can build radio and television medias with special local feature from the aspects of television and daily life. Some TV films and programs about Tea-leaf Picking Opera can be shot so that the audience can accept the influence of local culture in entertainment and cultivate a more solid mass foundation for the development of Tea-leaf Picking Opera in northern Guangdong.

2) Making entertainment programs with local characteristics and folk culture: for example, making a program that taking Tea-leaf Picking Opera as its subject in northern Guangdong and counties in this area to drive the development of local culture, on one hand, it strengthen the power of variety entertainment program in northern Guangdong, one the other hand, it improves the popularity of Tea-leaf Picking Opera in northern Guangdong.

3) Carrying out digital inheritance: If the local Tea-leaf Picking Opera can be made into a micro film belongs to Hakka people in northern Guangdong, this opera can be promoted to a certain extent and seek a new way of development. In this way, it will play a subtle role in promoting the culture of Tea-leaf Picking Opera and integrating it into the daily life of ordinary people.

C. Actively Developing the Peripheral Cultural Industry Cluster

1) Organizing and carrying out the relevant activities to integrate Tea-leaf Picking Opera in northern Guangdong into cultural tourism and exhibition industry: On one hand, it breaks the traditional and conservative performance form of Tea-leaf Picking Opera, on the other hand, it turns intangible cultural resources into mobile and innovative tourism cultural resources.

2) Organizing forces to infiltrate the music resources of Tea-leaf Picking Opera in northern Guangdong into internet: Nowadays, internet is an infinite potential new field, the music of Tea-leaf Picking Opera is not limited in words information, but also includes music scores, pictures, audio frequency and video frequency etc., which needs continuous hard exploration and collection of experts and scholars.

V. CONCLUSION

The Tea-leaf Picking Opera in northern Guangdong has formed a cultural brand with "Sanzi" as its artistic characteristics through long-term artistic practice, which has extremely high artistic value. The survey found that as a intangible cultural heritage project, the Tea-leaf Picking Opera in northern Guangdong currently faces crises such as lack of talents, shrinking markets, insufficient government support, and insufficient social attention, and it is still difficult to survive. Based on this, this article proposes three system improvement strategies such as increasing the support of government cultural institutions, integrating core forces including art colleges and universities, and actively developing peripheral cultural industry clusters. It is hoped that it will help promote the ecological development of Tea-leaf Picking Opera in northern Guangdong.
