I. Introduction

Literary works can be said as a form of human expression, with literary works one can express his thoughts/feelings which are poured into written form, both imaginative and real. Literary works can also be said to be the result of a human initiative that contains a high artistic value. Creating a literary work requires a lot of effort. Many aspects must be considered when creating literary works, for example, aspects of beauty or the benefits of literary works. In addition, a writer/poet will express his ideas based on his daily experiences. Many literary works that reflect the social life of a society are expressed in the form of stories (Nofiyanti, 2014).

Literary works are divided into two forms, namely poetry and prose. Prose consists of several varieties, one of which is short stories (short stories). The role of short stories in recent literary works is to provide a form of novelty or innovation from prose, in addition to novels and essays in the process of describing everyday human life. So, short stories can be said as literary works that describe everyday life because they are played by story characters. In this short story, characters are playing their respective roles to make a story a success. The existence of literary works is expected to make a positive contribution to today's young generation, coupled with the increasingly advanced technology that makes the younger generation easier and sometimes lazy.

The rapid change in the reality of life, one of which is marked by advances in technology, science, and art. It is undeniable that changes in behavior, character & life force also occur in everyday life. The negative impact caused by technological advances is the birth of an instant, pragmatic, hedonistic, and even individualistic perspective and thinking. To deal with these negative things, it takes the ability and willingness of various parties to reaffirm the values of character education. One of the problems the nation is currently experiencing is the fading of the culture of greeting each other, caring for one another, the fading of the culture of respecting each other's performance and helping each other. With this gotong royong character, it is hoped that this can be a solution in alleviating these problems. The need for planting character education starting from the family, school, and community environment. The role of religion is also expected to meet human needs in terms of balancing the character of students (Atika, 2014; Supriyono, et al; 2018; Maulana, 2020; Suryanti & Widayanti, 2018). To build Indonesia into a superior country, one of them starts from the younger generation. Today's young generation must be prepared through education. In addition to building knowledge (cognitive) and skill (psychomotor) competencies, education is also important for building character. Education is considered the best place to prepare agents of national change who will bring prosperity to society. In addition, through education, we can instill the basic values and character of the nation to the entire younger generation. One type of education that must be given to humans is character education. Character education is very important to be taught to humans because, with character, humans will become noble and become special beings. Education produces habits of life for a person. This can be seen from changes in cultural values that exist in individuals and their communities (Jamrah, 2016; Rokhman, et all; 2014; Munawaroh, 2019; & Kuning, 2018).

II. Review of Literatures

Character education can be done to the younger generation in several ways, one of which is through literary works. Literature has a role in character education, because literature in children's education plays a role in developing language, developing cognitive, affective, psychomotor, personality development, and developing social personality. Besides, literary works also contain a mandate that contains positive character values. Character education in Indonesia has become a non-negotiable need. National education is not only aimed at producing intelligent and skilled humans, but also humans with noble character. Character education not only makes a person have a noble character but also can improve his academic quality. Character education needs to be carried out to face the reality of the development of the 21st-century world which also has a major influence on changes in the morals and behavior of Indonesians, especially the younger generation. Character education is carried out to strengthen the competence of youth in the social field. In addition, character education also trains teenagers to be responsible in their social life. Solidarity character education can also be used to prevent social problems in human life by prioritizing the principle of humanity. It is also very important to teach the character of hard work to today's young generation because hard work can train young people who are superior and ready to build their own country through good education competent (Septiadi, et all; 2019; Cheung, 2010; Kanzunnudin, 2012; Sukardi, 2016; Amaliah, et al; 2018; Hanani, 2016; & Kusnoto, 2017).
The cultivation of character values is not only centered on the educational process of the younger generation but also lies in the individuals in educational institutions. One of the educational institutions that can train to instill character education is a school. Between schools, educators, and students are interrelated. They cannot be separated from each other. Educators should be responsible for referring to learning based on religious moral values and Pancasila. Education and reason are two things that cannot be separated because education is only applied to those who have a reason. The example of education that is seen as the most effective is exemplary, namely, the educator provides examples of direct actions/speech, then imitated directly by students so that students do good deeds as well. Exemplary requires unity between educators in various environments, both family, school, and community environments. Therefore, religious education is included in the field of pedagogical education which incorporates religious principles into children's education (Bieta, 2010; Watson, 2019; Cahyaningrum, 2017; & Ene, 2015).

Character education can be said as all efforts made by educators to shape the character of students. Character education is expected to build superior human resources. Character education must always be instilled in students, besides that character education is very necessary for students to develop their potential. Character education can involve students directly with real problems that are supported by reasoning in their environment. Character education trains students’ belief that they seek guidance and want to live a disciplined life to provide a sense of order in their lives. In general, a teacher is expected to be able to contribute to each of his students to live socially and in society (Supranoto, 2015; Koesoema, 2015; Tyas, 2020; Zlatkovic, 2012; Arthur, et al; 2006; Intan & Sutama, 2020).

Ikromovna, 2021 & Wening 2012 states that humans and society form a unity that cannot be separated in everyday life. One way for the younger generation to socialize is by using literary works associated with social and cultural learning. Character education must not only be shown by educators in the family, school, and community environment but character education must also be shown by the mass media. One of the most popular mass media today is Kompas. This research will focus on a collection of short stories published by Kompas Book Publishers in 2019 as the first printing with a total of xviii + 214 pages. This collection of short stories has character education learning through the mandate inserted by the author both morally, ethically, culturally, and religiously in the storyline following what is in everyday life.
