One of the key operating principles from the working paper of the Commission into the Future of Hospice Care (2012) identified leadership as a core requirement both at the strategic and operational level within organisations. St. Richard’s Hospice has been fortunate in that two members of the senior management team have completed the MA in Hospice Leadership at Lancaster University. We recognised that to embrace the new era of empowering the wider teams and individuals to recognise leadership as a core skill and understand how they can influence current and future development of the sector is core to sustainability.

Up until recently most of the investment in leadership and management has been directed toward individuals where there was an element of self-selection linked to career aspirations or performance management issues where new skills and knowledge were required to deliver their role.

The hospice has now developed and implemented a process where the identification of leadership and management is a bottom-up approach starting at the annual appraisal linked to identifying and nurturing future leaders. We recognised that many of our current staff did not recognise that they already possess inherent skills especially in terms of emotional intelligence, innovative methods for solutions in other hospices.

Evaluation RNs recognising their responsibilities as leaders and seeing a growth in project work and knowledge sharing that will educate new nurses.

Conclusion This culture shift is important to bridge gaps in leadership as effective leadership is critical in delivering high quality care and ensuring patient safety and facilitating positive staff development (Frankel 2008). Sharing an approach that looks at leadership styles and what they mean on IPU might offer alternative methods for solutions in other hospices.

Background Strengthening the leadership of hospice care is one of five key steps identified by the Commission into the Future of Hospice Care to ensure that hospices are fit for the future.

The landscape for hospice leaders is complex and challenging. The majority of hospices have seen their statutory funding remain static or even fall. The demand for end-of-life care is predicted to increase significantly and NHS and local authorities are urging local leaders to develop end of life care systems that are integrated, accessible, systematic and responsive.

To meet these challenges, hospice leaders need a coherent story about the role of their organisations in the future, their capacity to contribute to new systems of care and their ability to lead complex change.

Hospice leaders on the Hospice UK Strategic Leadership Programme will be identifying key features of this future landscape for hospice care. The 2016 Conference provides an exciting opportunity to share their emerging vision for the future with the wider hospice community.

Aims Hospice leaders on the Strategic Leadership Programme will be exploring the national landscape of end-of-life care and shaping their own response to the challenges. The aim is to bring these responses to the challenges to the 2016 conference, to stimulate debate and inspire leadership across the sector.

Methods During the first two modules of the Strategic Leadership Programme a cohort of over 30 hospice leaders from more than 20 hospices will develop an understanding of the potential and
