Does quantity matter to a stingless bee?

Johanna Eckert*1,2, Manuel Bohn1, Johannes Spaethe2

1Department of Comparative Cultural Psychology, Max Planck Institute for Evolutionary Anthropology, Leipzig, Germany.

2Department of Behavioral Physiology and Sociobiology, University of Wuerzburg, Germany

*Corresponding author: johanna.eckert@eva.mpg.de

Department of Comparative Cultural Psychology, Max Planck Institute for Evolutionary Anthropology, Deutscher Platz 6, 04103 Leipzig, Germany.

ORCID: 0000-0001-8161-082
Supplementary information

Preference test color blue vs. yellow

SI Fig 1 Results of the color preference test. Ten bees were tested in a non-rewarded preference test and given the choice between stimuli containing a blue or a yellow element. In 122 out of 235 trials, bees chose the blue stimulus. In 113 out of 235 trials, they chose the yellow stimulus.