1. INTRODUCTION
Organization Policies is one of the major interests to the field of organizational behavior and the practice of HRM. It reflects employees' attitudes towards their job and commitment to an organization. Organization Policies refers to one's feelings or state of mind regarding the nature of their work. It describes how content an individual is with his or her job. Organization Policies refers to a person's feeling of satisfaction on the job, which acts as a motivation to work. It is not self-satisfaction, happiness or self-contentment but satisfaction on the job. Organization Policies is defined as the pleasurable emotional state resulting from the appraisal of one's job as achieving or facilitating the achievement of one's job values. Organization Policies is not the same as motivation. It is linked to productivity, motivation, absenteeism, waste accidents, mental health, physical health and general life satisfaction.

There are three important dimensions to Organization Policies:
• Organization Policies is an emotional response to a job situation. It can't be seen, only inferred.
• Organization Policies is often determined by how well outcomes meet or exceed expectations.
• Organization Policies represents several related attitudes.

The Organization Policies is condition of establishing a healthy organizational environment in an organization.

Individuals want to maintain statute, high ranks and authority by giving their capabilities such as knowledge, ability education, health etc. The individuals who can't meet their expectations, with regard to their jobs become dissatisfied. Thus, this dissatisfaction affects the organization for which she/he works. Organization Policies is very important for a person's motivation and contribution to production. Organization Policies may diminish irregular attendance at work, replacement workers with in a cycle or even the rate of accidents. Organization Policies is an employee's thoughts and emotions towards their job and how they evaluate their job. This can be a judgment of their job overall, or of specific judgment such as pay, promotions, work tasks, coworkers and supervisors. It is important for organizations to care about their employees' organization Policies. It will promote employee's organizational commitment when they feel that they are satisfied with their jobs.

Dimensions of organization policies: There are six dimensions that represent the most important characteristics of a job about which people have effective responses,
• The work itself: The content of the work itself is a major source of satisfaction. This means the extent to which the job provides the individual with interesting tasks, opportunities for learning, and the chance to accept responsibility. Some of the most important ingredients of Organization Policies include interesting and challenging work and a job that • Compensation: Wages and salaries are significant, but a complex and multidimensional factor in Organization Policies. Money not only helps people attain their basic needs, but also is instrumental in providing upper-level need satisfaction. Employees often consider salary as a reflection of how management views their contribution to the organization. Fringe benefits are also important, but they are not as influential.

• Career Growth: Promotional opportunities seem to have a varying effect on the Organization Policies. This is because promotions take different forms and include a variety of rewards. For example, individuals who are promoted on the basis of seniority often experience Organization Policies but not as much as those who are promoted based on their performance.

• Supervision: Supervision is another moderately important source of Organization Policies. There are two dimensions of supervisory style that effect on Organization Policies. One is employee centeredness, which is measured by the degree of which a supervisor takes personal interest in the welfare of employees. The other dimension is participation or influence, illustrated by managers who allow their people to participate in decisions that affect their own jobs. This approach leads to higher Organization Policies. It is proved that a participative environment. Organization Policies is linked to productivity, motivation, absenteeism, waste accidents, mental health, physical health and general life satisfaction.

There are three important dimensions to Organization Policies.

• Organization Policies is an emotional response to a job situation. As such, it cannot be seen, it can only be inferred.

• Organization Policies is often determined by how well outcomes meet or exceed expectations.

• Organization Policies often represents related attitudes. As motivation is related to the satisfaction of the employees several motivational theories can be related to the Organization Policies. They are Maslow, Herzberg’s two-factor theory, Alderger’s ERG theory, Vroom’s expectancy theory, Portler and Flawler model all contributed to the work motivation.

Motivation of employees is the most important aspect of managing an enterprise. The success or failure of an enterprise depends mostly on how best the employees working are the involved and motivated. Among the four essential factors of production namely men, machine, material and money. The most important is men. The three other factors cannot be effectively utilized without the cooperation of the people. This motivation of the employee can be sub divided into the people. Organizational policies influence human resources in their attitude, performance, productivity and satisfaction. Hence the present study concentrates on impact of organizational policies on employee satisfaction and their issues at Andhra Pradesh Mineral Development Corporation Limited, Mangampet, which located in Kadapa district Andhra Pradesh state.
