T. Murphy Jr., of The College of William and Mary, and Steven Taylor, of the University of Minnesota.

Robert B. Lloyd, professor, Paul Nitze School of Advanced International Studies, Johns Hopkins University, was visiting lecturer of political science at Pepperdine University for the 1996–1997 school year.

Michael Zuckert, visiting professor of political science, Fordham University.

Awards

Dirksen Center Awards
Congressional Research Grants

Each year, the Dirksen Congressional Center awards Congressional Research grants to scholars in an effort to fund thoughtful study into congressional leadership and Congress. In cooperation with the Caterpillar Foundation, the Dirksen Center awarded $25,000 to a dozen political scientists, historians, and journalists. This year’s awardees include:

John Bader, University of California, Los Angeles, “Minority Party Leadership in the U.S. Senate”

Terry Royed, University of Alabama, “Party Pledge, Party Leadership, and Public Policy in the U.S., 1897–1995” (with Stephen Borrelli)

Martha Gibson, University of Connecticut, “Structure, Power, and Policy: U.S. Trade Politics and the Unintended Consequences of Congressional Reform”

William Grover, St. Michael’s College (VT), “The Congressional Progressive Caucus and the Policy Process”

Terri Halperin, University of Virginia, “The United States Senate: The World’s Greatest Deliberative Body, 1789–1821”

James Lindsay, University of Iowa, “Beyond the Water’s Edge: Congressional Leaders and Committees in Foreign Policy”

John Messmer, University of Missouri, “Early Political Life on the World Wide Web: Congress, Voters, and Organized Interests on the Internet”

Sharyn O’Halloran, Columbia University, “Congress, the Executive, and Delegation”

Rosanna Perotti, Hofstra University, “Congress and Illegal Immigration Restrictions, 1986–1996”

Bill Weinbeg, Independent Scholar, “Biography of Carl D. Perkins”

Clyde Wilcox, Georgetown University, “Individual Contributions in House and Senate Elections.”

ACLS Names Winners of 1996–97 Fellowship Competitions

The American Council of Learned Societies recently named winners in several of its annual fellowship competitions, included among them were 17 political scientists. They are listed below with name of fellowship and research program.

ACLS Fellowships

Sotirios A. Barber, professor of government, University of Notre Dame. Welfare and the instrumental constitution.

Joel Krieger, professor of political science, Wellesley College. British politics in the post-collectivist age.

Stephen N. Ndegwa, assistant professor of government, College of William and Mary. Land reform as an arena for the social construction of citizenship in multiracial societies in southern Africa.

Susan Shell, professor of political science, Boston College. Liberal thoughts of punishment: An examination and reappraisal.

National Program for Advanced Study and Research in China Research Program

Barry McCormick, associate professor of political science, Marquette University. Intellectuals and markets: The transformation of China’s public sphere.

Elizabeth J. Perry, professor of political science, Harvard University. Shaghai on strike: Workers, citizens, and the state in contemporary China.

Julia C. Strauss, lecturer in politics, University of London. The construction of bureaucratic administration and state service in 20th century China.

Graduate Program

Regina Abram, graduate student in political science, University of California-Berkeley. Visible hands: The politics of market regulation in Chengdu and Hanoi.

Matthew Bartels, graduate student in political science, Stanford University. The changing role of mass organizations in the transformation of the Chinese state.

Timothy Fitzpatrick, graduate student in political science, University of California-San Diego. The role of foreign firms in China’s industrial development.

Paul Thiers, graduate student in political science, University of Oregon. The potential for market based policy mechanisms to promote sustainable agriculture in China.

Program in East European Studies Dissertation Fellowships

Rawi Eugene Abdelal, department of government, Cornell University. Economic nationalism after the empire: The reconstruction of political economy in post-Habsburg East Europe and post-Soviet Eurasia.

Robin S. Brooks, department of political science, University of California-Berkeley. Forced to flower? Cultural identification, ethnic mobilization, and nation-building in post-communism.

Ann M. Grzymala-Busse, department of government, Harvard University. The post-1989 adaption of communist parties in East Central Europe.
Language training

Stephen R. Bloom, department of political science, University of California-Los Angeles, Latvian.

Michael R. Carpenter, department of political science, University of California-Berkeley, Czech.

Brad A. Gutierrez, department of political science, United States Air Force Academy, Hungarian.

Scholars in Health Policy Research Program

Each year the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation selects up to twelve social scientists to receive two-year fellowships to attend and study health policy at one of three institutions—the University of California, Berkeley, the University of Michigan, or Yale University. Jacqueline A. Stevens, who will attend Yale University, Greg D. Adams who will move to the University of Michigan, and Glenn D. Beamer, who will study at the University of California, Berkeley are the three political scientists who will participate in this year’s Scholars in Health Policy Research Program.

NSF Awards CAREER Grant to Political Scientist for First Time

Edward L. Gibson, assistant professor of political science at Northwestern University, is the first political scientist to receive the National Science Foundation’s “Faculty Early Career Development (CAREER) Program” award. Dr. Gibson will use his $275,000, five-year grant to support his research on and teaching about social and political change in Latin America.

Council of Foreign Relations International Affairs Fellows in Japan

C.S. Eliot Kang, assistant professor of political science at Northern Illinois University, and William J. Long, professor of international affairs and director of Graduate Programs, Georgia Tech, have been selected as inaugural recipients of the Council on Foreign Relation’s International Affairs Fellowships for Japan. Professors Kang and Long will spend between three and twelve months living in Japan and pursuing a course of study of their own design.

Wilson to Receive 1997 Boyer Award from AEI

James Q. Wilson has been selected to receive the American Enterprise Institute’s 1997 Francis Boyer Award. He will receive the award and deliver the Boyer lecture at the AEI’s annual dinner on December 4, 1997, at the Washington Hilton Hotel in Washington, D.C.

The Boyer award, whose winners include Gerald Ford, Ronald Reagan, Allan Greenspan, Henry Kissinger, and Jeane Kirkpatrick, is given annually to individuals who have made exceptional practical or scholarly contributions to improved government policy and social welfare. James Q. Wilson, a former president of the APSA, has written or edited fourteen books and dozens of scholarly articles on topics as diverse as the workings of the American government and the social bases for morality. His survey text, American Government, coauthored with John J. Dilulio, Jr., is currently in its seventh edition. In addition to serving as James A. Collins Professor of Management at the Anderson Graduate School of Management at UCLA, Wilson is a frequent contributor to the New Republic and the Weekly Standard and a commentator on CNN’s “Money Line.”

PSO Honors Mann, Ornstein, and Others

At its annual awards luncheon, held on August 29, 1997 in Washington, DC, the Policy Studies Organization presented nine awards to outstanding scholars and practitioners. Among the winners were Thomas Mann, Director of Governmental Studies Program at the Brookings Institution and Norman J. Ornstein, Resident Scholar of the American Enterprise Institute for Public Policy, selected to receive the Hubert H. Humphrey Award for being “outstanding policy practitioners.” Commenting on their achievements Walter Beach wrote the following: “Separately and together these distinguished political scientists have contributed to the study and implementation of significant issues of public policy. In the print and electronic media, in scholarly books and articles, in the classroom, and in Congressional hearings, executive branch briefings, and think tank conferences, they have presented ideas, debated issues and sought improvements and reforms for political institutions to function more effectively and provide citizens more opportunity for fair and open participation. Over the years the topics they have dealt with have included the major issues of our times: the presidential candidates’ nomination process, congressional organization reform, health care policy, tax and budget matters, the media and politics, and election laws including redistricting and voting regulations. They are currently major players on the issues of campaign reform. They are capable of thoughtful analysis but also able to provide astute sound bites in their presentations. In the important matter of having political scientists play a significant role in policy making along with public officials, interest group representatives and the media, Tom Mann and Norm Ornstein have raised the profile and involvement of our profession in an important way. They strongly merit selection as the 1997 Hubert Humphrey Policy Studies Organization Award recipients.

The winners continue the tradition of distinguished Hubert Humphrey Awardees: Ralph Huitl, Donna Shalala, Alice Rivlin, Jeane Kirkpatrick, Zbigniew Brzezinski, Daniel Patrick Moynihan, Charles Levine, John Bunzel, Robert Wood, Evron Kirkpatrick, William Crotty, Walter Broadnax and Jack Peltason.

Following is a list of the eight additional awards bestowed at the luncheon.

Harold D. Lasswell Award
For outstanding scholarship in contribution to our understanding of the substance or process of public policy
Recipient: William Berry of Florida State University.

Donald Campbell Award
For being an outstanding methodological innovator in policy studies.
Recipients: Gary King of Harvard and James Stimson of the University of North Carolina.

Theodore Lowi Award
For the best article in the Policy Studies Journal in 1996.
Recipients: Michael Mintrom of Michigan State, Sandra Vergari of the University of Northern Iowa, and John Portz of Northeastern University.

Jeffrey Pressman Award
For the best article in the Policy Studies Review in 1996.
Recipient: Edward Malecki of California State University at Los Angeles.

Thomas R. Dye Award
For outstanding service to the Policy Studies Organization.

Robert Lane Award
For outstanding service as a PSO president.
Recipient: Thomas Vocino of Auburn University at Montgomery.

Miriam K. Mills Award
For our outstanding young person and/or woman in the policy studies field.
Recipient: Marion Orr of Duke University.

Aaron Wildavsky Award
For the best policy studies book in 1995.
Recipients: All the present and past editors of the 250 PSO book titles.

Minority Scholars Awarded Fellowship

One hundred outstanding minority scholars were awarded Ford Foundation fellowships in a program administered by the National Research Council. The program makes wards across all disciplines, with 50 going to beginning graduate students, 30 to students writing dissertations, and 20 to scholars pursuing postdoctoral studies. Five political scientists were among this year's awardees:

Predoctoral Fellows
Adebajo Amusa, government, Harvard University
Heather Deneen Dash, political science, Emory University
Ricardo Ramirez, political science, University of California, Berkeley

Postdoctoral Fellow
Omar Guillermo Encarnacion, government, Georgetown University.

Other Awards
Sotorios Barber, professor, department of government and international studies, University of Notre Dame, received an American Council of Learned Societies Fellowship to assist him in completing his book Welfare and the Instrumental Constitution.

Charles Barrilleaux, department of political science, Florida State University, received a 1996–1997 Teaching Incentive Program Award.

Linda P. Brady, professor, Sam Nunn School of International Affairs, Georgia Tech, has received an American Council on Education Fellowship for the 1997–1998 school year. She will spend her fellowship year at the University of Iowa where she will work with President Mary Sue Coleman and Provost Jon Whitmore in the areas of strategic planning and assessment.

Kathleen Bratton, assistant professor of political science, State University of New York, Binghamton, has been named a Fellow at the Center for Advanced Study at the Norwegian Academy of Science.

James N. Danziger, dean, division of undergraduate education, and professor, department of politics and society, University of California, Irvine, was the recipient of the 1997 “Daniel G. Aldrich, Jr. Distinguished University Service Award” given by the Academic Senate at UC Irvine.

H. George Frederickson, Edwin O. Stene Distinguished Professor of Public Administration at the University of Kansas, was the 1997 recipient of the Charles H. Levine Memo... rial Award for Excellence in Public Administration. The award is given each year by the American Society for Public Administration to a public administration faculty member who had demonstrated excellence in teaching, research, and community service.

James C. Garand, professor of political science, Louisiana State University, is the 1997 recipient of the LSU Alumni Association Distinguished Faculty Award. The award recognizes sustained excellence in research, teaching, and service, and is one of LSU’s most prestigious university-wide faculty awards.

Bernard Grofman, professor, department of politics and society, University of California, Irvine was the recipient of the 1997 “Award for Teaching Innovation” for the School of Social Sciences from the Division of Undergraduate Education.

Wolfgang P. Hirczy de Miño, professor of political science, Oklahoma State University, won the 1997 Meyer Elkin Essay Contest sponsored by the Association of Family and Conciliation Courts. The winning essay, “Co-parenting Arrangements in a Jurisdiction with Statutory Guidelines,” will appear in the October 1997 issue of Family and Conciliation Courts Review. Some of the research was made possible through APSA’s Small Grants Program.

Robert S. Jordan, research professor of international institutions and professor of political science, University of New Orleans, has been named a Seraphia D. Leyda University Teaching Fellow for 1996–1999. During the fall semester of 1997, he will take up a Vice Admiral Edwin B. Hooper Research Grant at the U.S. Naval Historical Center in Washington, DC, and an Advanced Research Fellowship in the Center for Naval Warfare Studies at the U.S. Naval War College in Newport, Rhode Island.

Douglas Lemke, department of political science, University of Michigan, received a 1996–1997 Teaching Incentive Program Award from Florida State University where he last taught.

A. James McAdams, chair, department of government and international studies, University of Notre Dame, received the 1997 DAAD Prize for Distinguished Scholarship in German Studies from the German Academic Exchange Service and the American Institute for Contemporary German Studies.

Jonathan McFall, a graduate student in political science at Rutgers University, was awarded a Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation Charlotte Newcombe Doctoral Dissertation Fellowship for 1997–1998.

Mark P. Petracca, associate professor and chair, department of politics and society, University of California, Irvine, recipient of the 1996 “Teaching Excellence Award” for the School of Social Sciences from the Division of Undergraduate Education.

George Romoser, director, programs in technology, society, and values, University of New Hampshire, received a 1997 Summer Studies Grant from the Institute for Far Eastern Studies at the Kyungman University in Seoul for research on the North Korean regime and on the extent of South Korean planning for eventual social and political integration of “North” and “South” Koreans in the event of reunification.

William R. Schonfeld, dean, School of Social Sciences, department of politics and society, University of California, Irvine, was recipient of the 1997 “Distinguished Faculty Leadership Award for Teaching” given by the Academic Senate at UC Irvine.

Donald L. Scruggs, chair, social sciences and history program, and coordinator, international studies program, Stephens College (MO), won his university’s Outstanding Teacher Award for the 1996–1997 school year.

Rhonda Shreiber, a graduate student in political science at Rutgers University, won the 1997 Alice Paul Award for the best dissertation proposal by a woman graduate student in any field of political science.

Dale Smith, department of political science, Florida State University, received a 1996–1997 Teaching Incentive Program Award.

Patricia Sykes, associate professor, department of government, American University, has been named a visiting senior scholar through the Fulbright Program. She will spend her fellowship year at Trinity College, Dublin.