1 Introduction

In July 2019, Liangzhu Ancient City Ruins successfully applied for World Cultural Heritage, marking that the five thousand years of Chinese civilization has been widely recognized internationally. Liangzhu site is a sacred place to prove the history of Chinese five thousand years of civilization. It is a rare and precious treasure. We must protect it. In the post-World Heritage era, it is our responsibility to protect the Liangzhu site and continue the heritage of culture; it is our natural mission to spread the Liangzhu culture and release the national cultural influence.

With the development of the times, the significance of the protection and inheritance of world cultural heritage is widely recognized by the world. World cultural heritage is also presented to the public in a more diversified way, allowing the public to have a deeper understanding and interpretation of world cultural heritage. World cultural heritage development tourism has been recognized as an effective way to activate and utilize world cultural heritage. Heritage tourism research has also attracted widespread attention (Garrod, & Fyall, 2001).[1] Cultural heritage and tourism are in fact complementary to each other. The development of tourism is a way to realize the social value of cultural relics and historic sites, and it is an integral part of cultural heritage protection (Zhang, 2017).[2] Many successful cases of world cultural heritage protection and inheritance also show that development of world cultural heritage tourism not only effectively protects the world heritage, but also greatly enhances the national culture and urban visibility. As a world cultural heritage, Liangzhu Ancient City Ruins Park should vigorously promote the internationalization of tourism. This is not only the meaning of the protection and inheritance of Liangzhu culture, but also an inevitable requirement for expanding the influence of Chinese civilization. This article mainly solve the following problems: one is how to implement effective paths for the international tourism development of Liangzhu Ancient City Ruins Park, the other is how to make Liangzhu Ancient City Ruins Park presenting to the world and attracting the world come into Liangzhu.

2 Literature review

2.1 The connotation of heritage tourism

It is generally believed that heritage tourism refers to “a tourist activity that pays attention to all the materials and phenomena that we inherit and reflect this inheritance—from historical buildings to art and crafts, beautiful scenery.” (Yale, 1991)[3]. Heritage tourism is a sublimated feeling of "nostalgia", which equates the beauty of the past with the beauty of the future" (Shaw, 1991) [4]. Heritage tourism is to present heritage as a tourist attraction to tourists, allowing tourists to perceive cultural value, historical value and social value of heritage through tourism experience. World heritage is the common asset of people all over the world. Only by making the people all over the world enjoy the benefits of the world heritage can the value of the world heritage be truly reflected. Heritage tourism is also an effective way to protect the value of heritage and release its cultural effects.

2.2 Research progress on the international development of heritage tourism

The world heritage of a city not only represents the cultural heritage of the city, but also highlights the international temperament of the city. World heritage tourism is an effective way to enhance the visibility of world heritage and expand the international influence of cities. The development of heritage tourism has significant positive significance in promoting the internationalization of urban tourism. In many developed countries, heritage tourism is an important part of the tourism industry. For example, the British heritage industry is known as "the main force attracting overseas tourists (Markwell, 1997)"[5]. Doug and John (2008)[6] discussed the obvious educational and economic benefits of developing tourism on the Mayan ruins in Belize. Other scholars have conducted researches on the protection of underwater heritage, cultural sites, museums, etc. (Maikhuri, 2001)[7] and some high-tech and methods (Dif, & Pepe, 2000)[8]. Li (2008)[9] found that in the development of tourism in world heritage sites, population pressure, local economic development policies, and lack of financial support for cultural relics are the three main variables that affect the sustainable development of tourism in heritage sites.

A review of existing research shows that heritage tourism has been cultivated as a tourism product in the world, and it has received more and more attention. The concept of "heritage tourism" has also received more and more attention and has gradually become an independent research area.

First of all, there are some following trends in heritage tourism research: from heritage site to heritage tourist research, and then to the relationship between heritage tourist and community; interactive research of tourist experience and heritage protection.

Second, researches pay attention to both case studies and empirical studies. On the one hand, case studies and empirical studies are more in line with the research paradigm of social sciences; on the other hand, detailed case studies and empirical studies can provide guidance for practice.

Finally, the empirical studies on the internationalization of cultural heritage tourism is still weak, especially the interactive studies on cultural heritage tourism and urban tourism internationalization, which is still a research direction that needs to be strengthened in the future.
