Personal information

Dimitris Pavlopoulos is an Associate Professor in Sociology at the Vrije Universiteit Amsterdam (VU). He is also an ERC laureate (2019). He started his scientific career as a contract (junior) researcher in 2001 at the National Centre for Social Research in Athens-Greece. He subsequently carried out his PhD project with title 'Wage Mobility Patterns in Europe' from 2003 until 2007 at Tilburg University in the Netherlands. After completing his PhD, he was employed at the research institute CEPS/INSTEAD (currently LISER) in Luxembourg where he worked as a postdoc for the International Master in Social Policy Analysis that was given by CEPS/INSTEAD and the University of Leuven (KULeuven). From 2009 until 2012, he was working at the VU, first at the department of Methods and Statistics and then for the department of Sociology. As from January 2020, he is working as an Associate Professor at the department of Sociology.
