Armenian claims to Nakhchivan and its impact to the historical geography of the region (1918–1924s years)

Nurlana Aliyeva, Nakhchivan Branch of the Azerbaijan National Academy of Sciences

Azerbaijan People Republic the new sovereign state, created in May 1918 in the Muslim East, has lived and worked in hard and difficult conditions for 23 months. The Republic had to fight against the political and economic policies of the world's major powers, including Russia, the United States, England and France, and resorted to all means to maintain its sovereignty, and faced very complex challenges along the way. Under the pressure of these states, on May 29, 1918, the National Council of Azerbaijan was forced to decide on the issue of Iravan to the armenians in order to maintain their sovereignty while discussing the border problem between Azerbaijan and Armenia and he considered this decision a "historic necessity", a "unavoidable disaster" for heartbreak. During the Azerbaijan People Republic, neighboring countries made a number of territorial claims against Azerbaijan. At that time, its territory was 113,895.97 sq. km. Its 97,296.67 sq. km was undeniable, and 16,598.30 sq. km was disputed. To resolve such issues, the Treaty of Friendship was first signed on June 4, 1918, between the Ottoman Empire and the Republic of Azerbaijan. It was the first agreement signed by the Azerbaijan People Republic with any foreign state. The second article of the Batumi Treaty sets the border between Azerbaijan, Georgia and Armenia. According to the Batumi contract, Azerbaijan also suffered territorial losses. According to the agreement, the Sharur-Daralayaz province and the Nakhchivan accident, except for Ordubad, were transferred to Turkey. In addition, the regions of Kamarly, Ulukhanli and Vedihasar of the Iravan province were transferred to Turkey. On March 12, 1921, the Moscow Treaty was signed. With the participation of a representative of the Soviet Russia to clarify some of the territories following the Moscow Treaty, Turkey signed an agreement on October 13, 1921, between the three South Caucasus republics. The contract consisted of 20 articles and 3 annexes. A number of provisions of this treaty were consistent with the relevant articles of the Moscow Treaty. In general, this document was rejecting unequal rights, forcible contracts, and the Sevr treaty. Article 5 of the agreement was directly related to the fate of Nakhchivan. Thus, the Moscow and Kars treaties also resolved Nakhchivan's autonomy status.

Keywords: Nakhchivan, Moscow treaty, Kars treaty, autonomy status, Azerbaijan People Republic, Ottoman empire, controversial zone, historical geography

Вірменські претензії на Нахчіван та його вплив на історичну географію регіону (1918–1924 pp.)

Нурлана Алієва, Нахчіванська філія Національної Академії Наук Азербайджану

Нова суверенна держава, створена у травні 1918 р. на мусульманському Сході, уже 23 місяці живе і працює у важких і складних умовах. Республіка мала боротися проти політичної і економічної політики найбільших світових держав, зокрема Росії, Сполучених Штатів, Англії та Франції, і використовувати всі засоби для збереження свого суверенітету, і на цьому шляху зіткнулася з дуже складними проблемами. Під тиском цих держав 29 травня 1918 р. Наріональний Рада Азербайджану, обговорюючи питання про кордон між Азербайджаном і Вірменією, була змушені ухвалити рішення про передачу Єревана вірменам з метою збереження їх суверенітету. Під час Азербайджанської Демократичної Республіки сусідні країни висунули низку територіальних претензій до Азербайджану. У той час його територія становила 113,895,97 кв. км. 97,296,67 кв. км були незапрещеннями, а 16 598,30 кв. км осколковались. Для вирішення таких питань договір про дружбу був вперше підписано 4 червня 1918 р. між Османською імперією та Азербайджанською Республікою. Це був перший контракт, підписаний Азербайджанської Демократичної Республікою з будь-якою іноземною державою. Друга стаття Батумського договору встановлює між Азербайджаном, Грузією і Вірменією. Згідно з Батумським договором, Азербайджан також поніс територіальні втрати. Відповідно до угоди, у результаті район Шарур – одна з частин Шарур-Даралагезского повіту і Нахчиванського повіту, за винятком Ордубади, – був переданий Турсії.
Крім того, райони Гамарлі, Улуханлы і Ведібасар Іреванського повіту були передані Турсії.
12 березня 1921 р. був підписаний Московський договір. За участю представника Радянської Росії для уточнення деяких територій після Московського договору Турсія підписала 13 жовтня 1921 р.
у Карсі угоду між трьома Південноказакськими республіками. Контракт складався з 20 статей і 3 додатків. Низка положень цього договору відповідали відповідним статтям Московського договору. Загалом цей документ відхиляв нерівні права, примусові контракти і договір Севр.
Стаття 5 угоди була безпосередньо пов’язана з долею Нахчиваня. Таким чином, Московський і Карський договори також дозволили статус автономії Нахчиваня.

Ключові слова: Нахчивань, Московський договір, Карський договір, статус автономії, Азербайджанська
Народна Республіка, Османська імперія, спірна зона, історична географія

Армянські претензії на Нахчиван і його вплив на історичну географію регіона (1918–1924 рр.)

Нурлана Алиева, Нахчыванский филиал Национальной Академии Наук
Азербайджана

Новое суверенное государство, созданное в мае 1918 г. на мусульманском Востоке, уже 23 месяца живет
и работает в трудных и сложных условиях. Республика должна была бороться против политической и экономической политики крупнейших мировых держав, включая Россию, Соединенные Штаты, Англию и Францию, и использовать все средства для сохранения своего суверенитета, и на этом пути столкнулась с очень сложными проблемами. Под давлением этих государств 29 мая 1918 г. Национальный Совет Азербайджана, obсуждал вопрос о границе между Азербайджаном и Арменией, был вынужден принять решение о передаче Еревана армянам в целях сохранения их суверенитета. Во время Азербайджанской Демократической Республики соседние страны выдвинули ряд территориальных претензий к Азербайджану. В то время его территория составляла 113,895, 97 кв. км. 97 296,67 кв. км были неоспоримыми, а 16 598,30 кв. км оспаривались. Для реализации таких вопросов договор о дружбе был впервые подписан 4 июня 1918 г. между Османской империей
и Азербайджанской Республикой. Это был первый контракт, подписанный Азербайджанской Демократической Республикой с любым иностранным государством. Вторая статья Батумского договора устанавливает границу межд Азербайджаном, Грузией и Арменией. Согласно Батумскому договору, Азербайджан также понес территориальные потери. В соответствии с соглашением, в результате район Щарър – одна из частей Щарър-Даралагезского уезда и Нахчыванского уезда, за исключением Ордубада, – был передан Турции. Кроме того, районны Гамарлі, Улуханлы и Ведібасар Іреванського уезда були переданы Турції. 12 марта 1921 г.
был подписан Московский договор. При участии представителя Советской России для уточнения некоторых территорий после Московского договора Турция подписала 13 октября 1921 г. в Карсе соглашение между тремя Южнокавказскими республиками. Контракт состоял из 20 статей и 3 приложений. Ряд положений этого договора соответствовали соответствующим статьям Московского договора. В целом этот документ отклонил неравные права, принудительные контракты и договор Севр. Статья 5 соглашения была напрямую связана с судьбой Нахчиваня. Таким образом, Московский и Карский договоры также разрешили статус автономии Нахчиваня.

Ключевые слова: Нахчивань, Московский договор, Карский договор, статус автономии, Азербайджанська
Народна Республіка, Османська імперія, спірна зона, історична географія

Introduction.

According to Article XV of the Turkmenchay treaty, armenians started to move to many regions of Azerbaijan, including Nakhchivan. The goal of the armenians to move to this area was to change the ethnic composition of the population by force, and to turn these lands into armenian settlements. Even in this regard, in 1828, an "armenian province" was created on the territory of the Nakhchivan and Iravan khanates. Later times, popular uprisings and revolts have led to the collapse of this province. Seeing that it was impossible for armenians to invade Nakhchivan in the 19th century, they began to carry out this work at the beginning of the 20th century, or more precisely, in 1918–1924 by gun. At that time, their patrons as Russia, England, and the United States were providing military and financial support to armenians. The main purpose of these great powers was to create an Armenian state in these geographies, to break the Ottoman state's relationship with the Turkic world and so on. were issues. However, as a result of the struggle of the Nakhchivan population and the support of the Ottoman state, such issues, namely, the transfer of Nakhchivan to the Armenians, did not occur. Later, Nakhchivan's autonomy status did not allow any of Nakhchivan's territories to compromise with another state.

The main goal of the research.
To investigate and reveal the Armenian claims to Nakhchivan and its impact to the historical geography of the region (1918–1924 years). It is no coincidence that the historical geography of Nakhchivan is selected as a separate research object. This land, which has a special place in the history of the Azerbaijani people, has undergone significant changes over the centuries in terms of whether administrative – territorial, or employment, national and social composition, economic life and etc. In order to track the dynamics of these changes, it is necessary to identify the factors that contribute to these changes.

The investigated level of the theme.
The topic discussed has not been fully investigated so far from the historical and geographical point of view. Although the historical geography and administrative and territorial structure of different regions of Azerbaijan have been studied separately, the subject has not been studied systematically. However, from the historical point of view, investigations by I.Hajiyev, V.Gafarov, I.Musayev, M.Qasimli, I.Atnur and others were conducted.

The method of the research.
During the research, we used a method of research, comparative, and mutual analysis.

The Ottoman state and Nakhchivan.
After the overthrow of the Tsarism in Russia on February 27, 1917, as in all parts of the empire, there was a dichotomy in Nakhchivan. On the one hand, provisional government has been established in the city by the village committees of village committees and public organizations, on the other hand, the soviets of the deputates of workers and soldiers in Nakhchivan, Soldiers' Soviets were organized at Julfa, as well as at the Shahtakhti railway station.

The Special South Caucasus Committee, established on March 9, 1917, began to establish executive committees of the provisional government's agencies throughout the South Caucasus, including Azerbaijan. In the summer of 1917, the creation local governments of the provisional government in Nakhchivan was completed.

In February 1918, the Transcaucasian Commissariat (replaced by the Special Transcaucasian Committee on November 11, 1917) was replaced by a nationalist and auxiliary advocate for replacing the Transcaucasian Seas (legislative body) and dividing the Transcaucasia into independent states made musavats and dashnaks joint activities impossible [11, p. 9]. Azerbaijan People Republic the new sovereign state, created in May 1918 in the Muslim East, has lived and worked in difficult conditions for 23 months.

This Republic had to fight along with Russia in the vise of the political and economic policies of the great powers of the world – the USA, England and France, he has done all he can to maintain his sovereignty, and has faced many complex problems on this way. Under the pressure of these states, on May 29, 1918, the National Council of Azerbaijan was forced to decide on the issue of Iravan to the Armenians in order to maintain their sovereignty while discussing the border problem between Azerbaijan and Armenia and he considered this decision a "historic necessity", a "unavoidable disaster" for heartbreak. During the Azerbaijan People Republic, neighboring countries made a number of territorial claims against Azerbaijan. At that time, its territory was 113.895, 97 sq.km. Its 97,296,67 sq. km was undeniable, and 16,598,30 sq. km covered disputed areas [2, p. 6].

Azerbaijan People Republic has been struggling in the most difficult conditions to preserve the territorial integrity and sovereignty of the country, using all opportunities and trying to solve the fateful issues. To resolve such issues, the Treaty of Friendship was first signed on June 4, 1918, between the Ottoman empire and the Republic of Azerbaijan. It was the first treaty signed by the Azerbaijan People Republic with any foreign state. The second article of the Batumi Treaty sets the border between Azerbaijan, Georgia and Armenia [1, p. 1–3].

According to the Batumi contract, Azerbaijan also suffered territorial losses. According to the agreement, the Sharur section of the Sharur-Daralayaz province and the Nakhchivan province, except for Ordubad, were transferred to Turkey.

In addition, the Gamarly, Ulukanli and Vedibasars regions of the Iravan province were transferred to Turkey [7, p. 85]. Academician I. Hajiyev touched upon the terms of the Batum Treaty more broadly and accurately. He wrote: “Turkey has demanded a number of new territories and privileges in exchange for the casualties on the battlefield. These demands include the Axiska and Akhalkalak regions of the Tbilisi province, the Alexandropol (Gumru) and Surmali regions of the Iravan province, the Sardarabad part of the Echmiadzin province, the Kamarli (Garnibasar), Ulukanli (Zangibasar) which consist of the southern and southwestern parts of the Iravan province, the Sharur part of the Sharur-Daralayaz province, the province of Nakhchivan, except Ordubad region, as well as the Kars-Alexandropol-Julfa railway. In addition, during the war against England, Turkey should have been granted the right to use the entire Transcaucasian railway [5, p. 35].

The Ottoman empire began to acquire the territories it had acquired under the Batum Treaty. On July 20, 1918, the Ottoman army defeated the Steppe resistance and entered Nakhchivan.

Thus, the Turkish flag was waved in Nakhchivan. On August 15, 1918, these lands were officially occupied by a declaration issued by the Ottoman sultan Mehmed Vahidedin according to the "Eveliy-i Selase".

On September 14 of the same year a decision was made to establish governing bodies in the region. According to this decision, Batum province established including Kars, Erdahan, Batum and surrounding areas (Nakhchivan was included into the Ottoman territories under the Batum agreement–N.A.) [7, p. 87]. Nakhchivan region entered Batumi province as the part of the Kars liva.

After the reconciliation of Mudros in 1918, the Ottoman forces were forced to leave Nakhchivan on 11 November. The local population declared the establishment of the Araz-Turkic Republic in November 1918 to protect the region against Armenian aggression. The Araz-Turkic Republic, operating until March 1919, did not allow the Nakhchivan region to be occupied by the Armenians [6]. Since the Araz-Turkic Republic is the subject of an other research, we do not intend to dwell on it.

Nakhchivan general governorship. It is very interesting that while the Araz-Turkic Republic still existed, the Azerbaijani government established the Nakhchivan general governorship on February 28, 1919, based on the proposals of M. Mirbagirov and the provisional government of Nakhchivan, B. Nakhchivanski [2, p.12]. On February 28, 1919, the general governorship of Nakhchivan was established by the decision of the Government of the People Republic of Azerbaijan (In the documents, this governorship is also known as "South-West Azerbaijan general-governorship" or "General-governorship of Nakhchivan, Ordubad, Sharur-Daralayaz and Vedibasars districts."). As it seen from the geographical names above, we see which territories were including to the Nakhchivan general-governorship. Corresponding member of ANAS H. Safarli writes that the government's capital was Nakhchivan and its territory covers Nakhchivan, Ordubad, Sharur-Daralayaz and Vedibasars lands [12, p. 28]. In addition the author notes that, despite the relatively short existence, the government of the People Republic of Azerbaijan united much of Nakhchivan's historic land under one general-governorship [12, p. 28]. Bahram Khan Nakhchivanski was appointed governor-general, Karim Khan Irevanski was appointed deputy vice president for military affairs, and Haji Mehdi Bagirov was appointed as his deputy on the civil problems. A seven-member council was established under the general-governorship of Nakhchivan; on March 16, Bahram Khan replaced Nakhchivanski Hashimbeyov, who was summoned to the Ministry of Internal Affairs of the People Republic of Azerbaijan, and then Samad bey Jamillinski was appointed governor-general of Nakhchivan.

The complexity of the political condition, and first of all, the failure of senior officials to come to Nakhchivan due to the provocative actions of the Armenian Dashnak government, created serious difficulties for the general-governorship. In spite of all this, the government of the People Republic of Azerbaijan did not allow the general-governorship to stop its activity at any moment. In August 1919, the residence of the general governorship, who was forced to act in Ordubad for a short time, was then relocated to the city of Nakhchivan. Although the general-governorship of Nakhchivan was not able to operate more broadly and effectively because of the difficult conditions at that time, it played an important role in protecting the region from the Armenian aggression, in establishing and maintaining ties with the government of the People Republic of Azerbaijan [10, p. 84].

Although Nakhchivan was governed by the general-governorship obey the Azerbaijan Democratic Republic, Nakhchivan was occupied by the British in January 1919. The British, expressing Nakhchivan and Sharur's given to the obey of the Armenian government, make condition the armenians to pursue their own occupation policy. Although the Dashnaks seized a part of Nakhchivan in June 1919 with the direct help and involvement of English officers, the military units of the Nakhchivan National Committee crushed Dashnak's regular army and expelled them from Nakhchivan. Local authorities were in the hands of the National Council [13, p. 33].

Gumri, Moscow and Kars treaties. On December 2, 1920, Turkey and the Armenian Dashnak government signed the Gumri agreement. According to this agreement, starting from the Lower Karasu river, the Araz river is located on the north of Kecachin, on the Arpachay river, then on the Karakhan valley, on the eastern part of the Great Kemli – Kyzylbash – Great Aghbaba. The final determination of the boundary line (two weeks after the date of signing) will be made by the mutual commission in place. Kuku mountain, 10282–8022, Hamasur mountain–8160, Gurdgulag village, Sayat Mountain – 7868, Arpachay Houses – 3080, Gomurlu Mountain – 6930 – Saray spring–8071. Ararat station, Araz river, Nakhchivan, Shahtakhti, Sharur, south of the strip passing through Lower Karasu, will determine the form of government and Armenia will not intervene in the territory covered by this administration and local administration will be established under the rule of Turkey in the region;

Article 12: The Turkish Government undertakes to ensure the security of the transit route between Armenia, Sharur-Nakhchivan-Shahtakhti and Julfa-Iran-Maku. The Nakhchivan borders, except for Develi and Arazadayan, have been defined by the Gumri agreement, as a result of the Great Vedi and surrounding areas, which have historically been the Turkic regions, Uluhanli, Gamarly and most importantly, the Nakhchivan until 1920. The northwestern border was Develi. Armenia will not intervene in Nakhchivan's post-referendum governance system and local administration will be established under the rule of Turkey [1, p. 390]. Academician I.Hajiyev affirms the boundaries as above [4]. Nakhchivanians and Turks objected to the Gumru treaties which was signed RSFSR and Soviet Armenia, and russians and armenians objected to the Gumru treaty, which was signed between Turkey and Dashnak Armenia in the late 1920s.

Although the position of Soviet Russia on the problems of Zangezur, Nakhchivan and Sharur-Daralayaz had changed many times, it had some secret plans and unambiguously coincided with the ideas of the armenians. But in the foreign policy plans of such a big country as Russia, it was hard to turn Lenin and Chicherin out of their notorious thoughts.

Notwithstanding the determination of N. Narimanov, he was remaining alone in the problem of armenian. Here, Turkey provided decisive assistance to the "victory" of N. Narimanov's position.

Thus began the Russian Turkish negotiations. The Russian-Turkish Conference began its work on February 27, 1921 in Moscow. The conference was postponed for a week because of disputes. To get out of the conference postponed, Yusuf Kamal decided to meet with more influential Soviet figures. Negotiations resumed after he met with I.Stalin on March 6. During the conference, G. Chicherin, who tried to extradite Nakhchivan to Armenia during the conference, suggested that he find a formula that would establish Nakhchivan's inevitable relationship with Azerbaijan and its use of autonomy under its protection. The Turkish delegation asked to submit the second part of the formula as follows: provided that Azerbaijan will not compromise this protection to any third country. " The borders of Nakhchivan had to be determined by military experts. Discussing the border between Nakhchivan and Armenia, the Russian delegation said that the line determined by the experts had exceeded the requirements of Azerbaijan, which did not want to carry out protection in any part of the Iravan province and accepted that the last border was a Gurd gate. For them, Although this issue is not of primary importance due to the close ties between the Soviet republics, it would be best to define the boundaries of the Sharur-Daralayz region by an ethnographic principle [8, p. 99]. The Russian delegation said that the border between Nakhchivan and Armenia could be considered temporary. If there is any change in the direct negotiations between Azerbaijan and Armenia in the future, then these changes cannot be regarded as a violation of Azerbaijan's obligation not to compromise its protectorate. The final settlement of the issue is difficult due to the population displacement, as it has recently occurred between these countries. The Turkish delegation underscored that this issue should be unambiguously resolved by Turkey's importance on the security of its eastern borders, and any negotiations between Azerbaijan and Armenia on this issue should be excluded. In this case, the Russian delegation said that the borders of Azerbaijan should be obeyed. Because changes in the border line from Moscow cannot be determined without inquiring from the concerned government and the public. At the suggestion of the Turkish delegation, it was decided to keep the Sharur-Daralayz area in Nakhchivan. In the disputed part of the Iravan province, the border goes from Mount Gomurlu (6930) to the Saraybulag mountains (8071), the Ararat station. On March 16, 1921, the RSFSR and Turkey signed an agreement consisting of 16 articles and annexes. According to the third article, the parties agreed that Nakhchivan province would create an autonomous territory under the auspices of Azerbaijan, under the provisions of paragraph C of Annex 1 to this Agreement, provided that Azerbaijan would not compromise any third state.

Lower to the surface of the Araz surface relief in the east, and to the west the Dahna mountains (3829) – Veledag (4121) – Bagirsag (6787) – the triangular Gomurlu mountain (6930), formed in the Nakhchivan zone, 6971. The boundary of the specified area, which passes through the Ararat station and ends at the point where Karasuyn meets Araz, will be established by a commission comprised of representatives from Turkey, Azerbaijan and Armenia. The territory of Nakhchivan in paragraph C of Annex 1 was defined as follows: Ararat station – Saraybulaq (8071) – Gomurlu mountain (6839), (6930) – 3080 – Sayatdag (7668) – Gurdugulag village – Kamesurdag (8160) – 8022 – Eastern administrative boundary of Kukudagh (10282) and former Nakhchivan province [8, p. 102–104].

During the negotiations on the signing of the Moscow Treaty on March 12, 1921, the Turkish delegation unanimously supported the idea of keeping the Sharur-Daralayz region in Azerbaijan as a whole. The Turkish side justified its position with the evidence that firstly there were known bloody events in the area and the need for Turkish troops to come to the region; Secondly, this circle was inhabited by Muslims. Because of this, the right of guardianship over that territory should be granted to Azerbaijan [9, p. 303]. With the participation of a representative of the Soviet Russia to clarify some of the territories following the Moscow treaty, Turkey signed an agreement on October 13, 1921, between the three South Caucasian republics. The contract consisted of 20 articles and 3 annexes.

A number of provisions of this treaty were consistent with the relevant articles of the Moscow Treaty. In general, this document was rejecting unequal rights, forcible contracts, and the Sevr treaty. The treaty covered a whole set of provisions on Kars and Batumi territorial issues, the provision of transport communications and the free movement of citizens, and the unwavering civil rights issues, regardless of national or religious affiliation. Much of it was devoted to the settlement of the refugee problem and the change of military territories, and the determination of the main directions of economic, cultural and consular relations between the negotiating parties.

Article 5 of the agreement was directly related to the fate of Nakhchivan. Here again the issue of keeping Nakhchivan within Azerbaijan and granting autonomy was fixed. Unlike the Moscow Treaty, Article 5 of the Kars Treaty sets out the parties agreeing on the status of Nakhchivan. These were the governments of Turkey, Azerbaijan and Armenia. This article states that "the Turkish government, the Republic of Armenia and the Soviet Union agree to establish Nakhchivan province an autonomous territory under the auspices of Azerbaijan within the boundaries set out in Annex III of the Treaty".

The territory of Nakhchivan was defined within the boundaries set out in Annex III of the Treaty: “[Nakhchivan territory] starts from Urmia village, from there on a straight line to the Arazdeyen station (this station will remain for the Armenian SSR), then on a straight line to the west of Dashburun mountain (3142), thence to the river Dashburun (4108), mountain rod (6607 or 6587), "Rod." Going along the administrative boundaries of the Iravan and Sharur-Daralayaz provinces south of the spring (spring), from the height of 6629 to the coal (6839 or 6930), then to the height of 3080, to Sayatdagh (7868), to the village of Gurdgulag, Hamasur mountain (8160), to the height of 8022, Kukudagh (10282) and [finally] at the eastern administrative border of the former Nakhchivan province” [4; 8, p. 146].

Turkish sources note that according to the Kars treaty, Kars and Erdahan sanjags were handed over to Artvin Turkey in the southern part of Surmali and Batum east of the Araz river [1].

Conclusion.

The collapse of Tsarist Russia led to the recapture of the lost lands of the Ottoman state and a number of military and political events in the Caucasus. Different nations in the region have begun their activities to gain independence. However, Azerbaijani Turks, Georgians and Armenians were trying to unite around a political organization on the one hand, and on the other hand, had a bloody struggle for the South Caucasus. At this time, the Turkish army began moving towards the Caucasus. The Turkish army wanted to ensure security in the region. However, Turkey was forced to leave the region by agreeing with the Antanta states. The Turks' departure from the region created conditions for the British and Armenians who supported them. But their plans failed. But in these relationships Turkey which protected Nakhchivan with the Gumri agreement, strongly reacted Azerbaijan's donation of Nakhchivan to Armenia with the request of Soviet Russia. That is why the Moscow and Kars treaties defined the territorial integrity and status of Nakhchivan. Turkey became a protective country. Thus, the Moscow and Kars treaties fully resolved the issue of Nakhchivan's status and dependence with international treaties. The Kars Treaty has been signed indefinitely, and none of the signatory states can terminate it unilaterally [4]. The Moscow and Kars treaties also solved Nakhchivan's autonomy status.

Relations between Nakhchivan which was transferred to the Soviet administration under the auspices of Azerbaijan and Turkey continued until 1924. After the relations were cut, the Caucasus Central Executive Committee, acting under the influence of the Armenians, gave 9 villages of Nakhchivan to Armenia under the pretext of defining the border. But they could not go much further under the agreement with Turkey. Turkey has formed a legal and political base for the establishment of good neighborly relations and business relations with the South Caucasus republics, ensuring the security of its borders. The “Nakhchivan issue” has been fairly settled in accordance with historical and ethnocultural realities. Armenia's intentions to seize this historic territory of Azerbaijan, namely Nakhchivan, have been in vain. However, despite all this, Nakhchivan was isolated from Azerbaijan. We can note some changes in Nakhchivan's borders.

REFERENCES

1. Atnur, I. (2013). Nakhchivan from Ottoman administration to Soviet administration (1918-1921). Nakhchivan: "Ajami" Publishing-Printing Association [in Turkey].
2. Azerbaijan People Republic and Nakhchivan. (2010). Nakhchivan: "Ajami" Publishing-Printing Association [in Azerbaijanian].
3. Gumru, Moscow and Kars treaties. (2004). Nakhchivan [in Azerbaijanian].

www.grani.org.ua 153
4. Hajiyev, I. (2011). Kars treaty and the fate of Nakhchivan [in Azerbaijani].
5. Hajiyev, I. (2017). Impact of some of the agreements signed in the historical and political context of the transfer of Iran to Armenians. News of the Nakhchivan Branch of ANAS, 3,33–41 [in Azerbaijani].
6. Isganderov, A. (2014, May 4). The first republic in Muslim East – Azerbaijan People Republic. "Xalq" paper, p. 5 [in Azerbaijani].
7. Qafarov, V. (2009). Batum conference and Azerbaijan. History and its problems, 1-2, 81–88 [in Azerbaijani].
8. Qasimli, M. (2016). Armenian claims from the sovietization of Armenia to the occupation of Azerbaijani territories: history - as it was (1920–1994s years). Baki: Science Development Foundation under the President of the Republic of Azerbaijan [in Azerbaijani].
9. Musayev, I. (1996). The political situation in the regions of Nakhchivan and Zangezur of Azerbaijan and the policy of the foreign countries (1917–1921s years). Baki: BDU [in Azerbaijani].
10. Encyclopedia of Nakhchivan. (2005). 2nd ed., rev. The 2nd print. In 2 Volumes. (Vol. 2). Nakhchivan [in Azerbaijani].
11. Sadigov, S. (1995). From the history of Nakhchivan Autonomous Republic. Baki: Science [in Azerbaijani].
12. Seferli, F. (2012). Notes on the geographical history of the Nakhchivan region. News of Nakhchivan branch of ANAS. Series of social and humanitarian sciences, 8 (1), 26–31 [in Azerbaijani].
13. Shihaliyev, E. (2016). The "Armenian policy" of England and its impact to Nakhchivan based on the archives materials of Great Britain (1917-1920). Nakhchivan State University. Scientific works, 5 (79), 28–36 [in Azerbaijani].