INTRODUCTION

Psychology is a study of science that has long since emerged and developed in Indonesia. But there are still many problems that pose obstacles in the development and application of psychological sciences in Indonesia. Problems such as funds and human resources are still very limited, can not be denied the government is not able to provide adequate funds and facilities to conduct research. In addition, people in this country are many who do not understand what is actually examined in the disciplines of psychology, and many still have a less-than-appropriate assumption concerning the psychology student who is said to be able to predict the future One, as well as the people of Indonesia still tend to expect psychology as a definite science that can provide a definite answer and solution for various problems.

The theory of multicultural counseling is a great need to be developed in a detailed or comprehensive manner (Ivey, Ivey, Simek-Morgan, Cheatham, & Rigazio-DeGilio, 1993; Ponterotto, Fuertes, & Chen, 2000). So far, the large contributions of multicultural theories are still limited in certain scopes, such as cultural adaptation theories culture, identity development theories of identity development theories (Ponterotto, 2010; Pope-Davis & Dings, 1995; Vera & Speight, 2003). The application of the internal or external theory of the control locus application of internal/external locus of control theory to multicultural counseling and others who use multicultural theory as a basis of theory in developing certain disciplines (Arredondo et al., 1996).

The area of study of the vast multicultural theory needs to be examined by multicultural counselors. The thing that the counselor has to note is that the concept of multicultural theory is closely related to the level of awareness of the Counsellor of Culture, individual assessment of the culture-based contemplational, cultural adaptation process, the development of cultural identity, socio-political influence between counselors and Conley, application of traditional counseling techniques and the techniques that originated (Arthur & Januszowski, 2001).

The Counseling that developed in Indonesia nowadays is the counseling came from a Western country (United States). The experts creating counseling theories were the Western people who were very strong with the Western societal and cultural environment. Therefore, the theories they resulted in cannot be separated from Westerns cultural effects, while Western culture certainly differs from the Indonesian.

Counselor in Indonesia Must Understand the Culture of the Counselor

In the counseling practice, the counselors tend to more prioritize the use of counseling techniques in accordance with their founder’s ideas (from their origin Country America) than pay attention to the cultural factors in region or country.
where it is. Western Culture certainly differs from Indonesian. Indonesia rich in cultures, there are cultural differences among ethnic, for example, Javanese cultural Ethnic and Balinese cultural ethnic, Makassar cultural ethnic, and so on. In the Javanese culture itself there are also cultural differences among Central Java, West Java, East Java Ethnic; in East Java specifically any areas with different cultures, for example, Madura, Surabaya and Using of Banyuwangi. Eventually, the cultural differences take place between counselors and clients, the use of counseling techniques to improve the uncovering of clients selves have not method the needs due to the availability of cultural differences between counselors and clients (Collins & Arthur, 2010). For example, cultural differences due to the differences in Races, Ethnic, Religions, Languages, Values, and Sexes (Koentjaraningrat, 1987).

Cultural Influences in Counseling

Counselors of different cultures to the clients and do not understand clients’ culture, potentially will have difficulties in counseling clients (Rofiq, Degeng, Hidayah, & Atmoko, 2009). Therefore, counselors demanded to have cross-cultural knowledge so that can provide the counseling services effectively for the clients of different cultures (Glockshaber, 2005). The cultural factors should be considered by the counselors if they provide counseling to clients of their different socio-cultural backgrounds (Naser & Utami, 2017). Cultural differences can influence the clients’ decisions and counseling results to solve cultural obstacles that happen in counseling, it needed counseling service with a background. The need for counseling with background has got scientific recognition from the experts. The importance of cultural variables in all of the counseling activities signaling the necessity to study, analyze and understand the specific cultural values and apply them in counseling (Wajdi, 2016).

The change and development of the increasingly advanced community demand the profession of guidance and counseling to be able to adapt to the demands, expectations, and needs of the community (Palmer & Laungani, 1998). The efforts of the professional development of guidance and counseling have been done to gain recognition from society. The guidance and counseling service not only covers the school environment but also in the settings of the wider community, where we know that Indonesian people consist of many different cultural backgrounds, diversity of cultures that exist in Indonesia is a wealth for this nation but also can be a factor in the emergence of new problems in the life of this nation and state, wherein our daily lives, we are always alongside other cultures where the characteristics of the character of each of the cultures that we meet is always unique and has the peculiarities of each different from one another (Bimrose, 2002). So also the profession of BK, in providing services to the community is sure to bring the culture of both sides either from the counselor or from the side of the Conslee, not the problem if the cultural background of counselors and Conslee comes from the background The same culture, but rather if the culture is identified in the counseling process from different cultural backgrounds. In an effort to facilitate the service then a counselor must have knowledge of multicultural counseling which as a capital for the professional development of the profession (Moodley, 1999).

The area of study of the vast multicultural theory needs to be examined by multicultural counselors. The thing that counselor is to note is that the concept of multicultural theory is closely related to the level of the counselor's awareness of culture, individual assessment of the culture-based contemplating, cultural adaptation process, cultural identity development, influence Between counselors and Conslee, the application of traditional counseling techniques and techniques derived from the region, and the complex relationship between the client, counselor and social context (Seemann, Buboltz, Jenkins, Soper, & Woller, 2004).

The development of the current comprehensive multicultural theory is written by Derald Sue titled "Counseling the culturally different: Theory and practice" (Sue, 1999). The researcher contributed substantially to the field of multicultural counseling. Multicultural Counseling not only focuses on one area such as feeling, thought, action or social system and ignoring other areas such as biological influences, beliefs, politics, and cultural influences. Much wider they are trying to see a thoroughly comprehensive multicultural counseling. This brings about the viewpoint of the multicultural counseling Metateori.

METHOD

This study used a qualitative approach to the type of content analysis research (content analysis). Content analysis is a type of research that is used to examine the richness of meaning of an object under study, namely the documentation of data in the form of text, images, symbols, and so forth.
