The study presented in article number 2200956 by Shufa Zheng, Yu Chen, and co-workers, shows that dynamic changes occur in the respiratory tract and gut microbial communities of COVID-19 patients with different disease severity and that significant changes in the composition of the respiratory tract and gut microbiomes can be found between intensive care unit (ICU) and non-ICU patients.