Abstract. With the wide popularization of computer network at any time, students' computer technology operation level has been greatly improved than before, and students have more channels to obtain information. In the Internet environment, the development of high-quality student party members is an extremely important work for the party's construction, and has practical significance for the realization of the two centenary goals and the great rejuvenation of the Chinese nation.

1. Introduction
Recruiting Party members in Colleges and universities is an important part of Party building in Colleges and universities. It is not only closely related to the construction of Party organizations, but also related to the cultivation of young people. In the new period, the cultivation of excellent college youth is to lay the foundation for the development of Party Organizations, transport excellent young Party members, strengthen the party team, and realize the party's sixteen character policy, which is the top priority of Party building in Colleges and universities. Therefore, strengthening the quantitative assessment of the quality of Party members' development is an important means to cultivate excellent party members. It can not only guarantee the quality of Party members, but also promote the party building in Colleges and universities to control all aspects of the development of Party members.

2. Problems existing in the quantitative assessment of the development quality of Party members in Colleges and Universities
With the increase of enrollment, the individualization and trend of young students have brought great challenges to Party building in Colleges and universities. First, the quality of students enrolled is uneven in quality, and their learning ability, adaptability and academic performance are very different. The premise of training party members is uncertain, leading to the purity and advanced nature of the party. Second, in many colleges and universities, the procedures of joining the party are not standardized, there are perfunctory and formalized characteristics. In addition, the selection and training of Party members are not professional, and the quality and quality of Party members are not guaranteed fundamentally. Third, in the process of training probationary party members, there are problems such as lack of discipline and consciousness; fourth, there is no atmosphere of Party building in Colleges and universities, and Party members are the first The leading role and exemplary role have not been fully reflected, only stay in the level of class training, divorced from the specific practice, leading to the cultivation of Party members has not been substantive role; fifthly, the purpose of quantitative assessment of Party members is to cultivate high-quality party members, high-quality party members can not do without supervision and assessment; sixth, colleges and universities lack quantitative assessment of Party members Lack of advanced management system and communication platform, so that the assessment and training can not be solved in time, which also affects the party building work in Colleges and universities to a certain extent.

3. The content of quantitative assessment on the development quality of college student party members

As we all know, the development process of Party members is rigorous and standardized, and its quantitative assessment also involves various aspects. In addition, we should select targeted content and assessment difficulties according to different stages. At present, the improvement of the assessment process and content is an important part, with the following specific points:

First, improve the application for Party membership and ideological report. The application for joining the Communist Party of China is a statement of students' willingness to join the party organization. Its content mainly includes the understanding of the party and the elaboration of the thought. It expresses the students' determination to join the Communist Party of China. It is also an assessment factor for whether they can become activists or probationary party members.

Second, actively study the party's theoretical knowledge. In the activist stage, colleges and universities will regularly organize study to study the party's thought, theory, development line, and the tasks undertaken as activists and Party members. In addition, it is also an important test for students' ideological purity. Whether they can unwaveringly support the party, love the people, follow the socialist line, and study the party's theoretical knowledge in a down-to-earth manner is also quantified Important criteria for assessment.

Third, pay attention to the evaluation and opinions of the teachers and students of the Youth League branch. In the process of learning and training, the teachers and students of the Youth League branch get along most closely with them. Therefore, their evaluation is very important. In the short time of learning and getting along with each other, they can get a glimpse of students' Ideological and moral quality, as well as their learning ability and attitude. Therefore, the evaluation of teachers and students should also be included in the assessment.

Fourth, the opinions and suggestions of cultivating people. The relationship between the examinee and the cultivator is not only the relationship between the superior and the subordinate, but also the relationship between training and learning. The assessed object should regularly inform the cultivator of his psychological thoughts and learning attitude at this stage, which is the most basic ideological consciousness as an activist. After a period of training, the opinions and ideas of the cultivated person are also the key to determine whether the training object is qualified Key factors.

Fifth, participate in the activities of the branch. As a probationary Party member, we should go deep into practice, contact with the masses, go deep into the grassroots, understand the implementation and effect of the party's policies, actively participate in the educational activities or public welfare activities of the Party branch, and improve their ability and accomplishment. This is an important way to improve discipline, organization and sense of belonging, and is also one of the main contents of quantitative assessment.

Sixth, self summary and evaluation. During the training period, the training object should constantly carry out self-evaluation and self summary, have a clear understanding of the knowledge and practical ability learned in the training process. More importantly, we should understand the importance of becoming a party member and the sense of responsibility through training. Only in this way can we always restrain ourselves in our later life, and constantly strengthen our understanding of the party and our theoretical knowledge of the party The study of knowledge makes unremitting efforts to become a qualified and excellent Party member.
4. Standard suggestions on quantitative assessment of the development quality of Party members in Colleges and Universities

4.1. Set up reasonable assessment standards
In order to carry out the quality quantitative assessment of recruiting party members in Colleges and universities, the first thing to do is to set up assessment standards according to the actual situation of the Party branch, such as the number of personnel, assessment standards, system establishment, etc. Secondly, according to the status of students' development, such as professional characteristics, grade distribution, etc., it is not only conducive to organizational construction, but also has a certain fairness and rationality. In addition, corresponding assessment standards should be formulated for different grades. For example, lower grade students can participate in grassroots activities organized by the Party branch and some public welfare activities inside and outside the school when there are relatively few cultural courses. This is also a part of the assessment. In addition to the heavy task of cultural courses, senior students are also involved in the problem of further study and employment, so they are under great pressure. In view of this situation, we can take the example of their academic achievements, job hunting activities, learning pacesetters as the quantitative assessment criteria. This not only has a certain incentive for the cultivation of activists, but also promotes them to constantly strengthen themselves and further improve their ability. At the same time, it is also convenient for the management of Party branches.

| Personal evaluation | Cultivation Evaluation | Mass evaluation | Branch evaluation |
|---------------------|------------------------|-----------------|-------------------|
| 30 points           | 20 points              | 20 points       | 30 points         |

4.2. Establishing an information platform for Party member supervision
The important way to assess the quality of Party members is to carry out supervision along with them. The foundation of the survival of the Communist Party of China is the mass foundation. Party members serve the masses, serve the grassroots, and accept the supervision of the masses. Only in this way can the Party keep its vitality forever. Therefore, in the process of recruiting party members, we should use the strength of the masses to carry out strict supervision on them, so as to realize the assessment and evaluation of activists. Both Party members and students are in contact with the teachers and students around them. Their speeches and opinions are the most referential. However, in terms of the current situation, there are often perfunctory and perfunctory situations in listening to opinions. The fundamental reason lies in the lack of effective communication between branches, classes and mass organizations. On the other hand, due to the lack of an effective communication platform, the branch's channels for the voice of the masses are blocked. In this case, a long-term and effective communication platform should be established to spread opinions, suggestions, experiences and voices through the platform, which can not only improve the work efficiency of the branch, but also strengthen the quality of Party members.

4.3. Strengthen practical education and optimize the content and structure of assessment
In the assessment of Party members, we should not only stay on the meeting, process and paper, but also conduct in-depth investigation, based on practice and conduct all-round investigation. In this regard, the first to take action should be the Party branch. First of all, we should combine the actual situation of students, formulate feasible assessment standards, reasonably allocate practical tasks through the necessary theoretical knowledge and practical approaches of Party members, stimulate their learning initiative and enthusiasm, learn and improve themselves in practice, and show themselves.
5. Conclusion
The quantitative indicators of Party members should start from the school, education management and student training, improve the corresponding assessment content and system, build an effective communication platform, and enrich practical activities, so as to serve as the standard of quantitative assessment, which not only provides the direction for the cultivation of Party members, but also puts forward requirements for the behavior of Party members, and further increases the accuracy of quantitative assessment.
