The worm process for the Ising model is rapidly mixing

Timothy Garoni
tim.garoni@monash.edu
Monash University
(Joint work with A. Collevecchio, T. Hyndman and D. Tokarev)

We consider the worm process for the zero-field ferromagnetic Ising model, introduced by Prokofiev and Svistunov. We prove the process is rapidly mixing on all finite graphs and at all temperatures. As a corollary, we construct fully-polynomial randomized approximation schemes for the Ising susceptibility and two-point correlation function.