(A) and (B) illustrate the relationship between social concern and physical concern, respectively, and SCR (Skin Conductance Response) levels. The graphs show separate lines for 'alone' and 'social' conditions, indicating how SCR levels vary with increasing concern levels in each domain. The shaded areas represent the confidence intervals for the SCR responses under different conditions.