Abstract. The perfect computer simulation legal mechanism has an important safeguard function and plays a key role in building a socialist harmonious society. Chinese current legal system is still imperfect in terms of legislation and law enforcement, such as lagging legislation, unfair legislation, unfair justice, etc. Building a harmonious society is a topic of common concern to the whole society and is widely recognized by the public. Machine learning is an algorithm that computer programs can make judgments and inferences through learning data, thus simulating human intelligence activities and improving the performance of the system itself. The application of machine learning has brought opportunities for social development and injected vitality into legal reform. Therefore, based on computer simulation, this paper introduces the important role of perfecting computer simulation legal mechanism in building a socialist harmonious society, and elaborates four kinds of computer simulation legal mechanisms in building a socialist harmonious society.

1. Introduction
Harmonious society is the ideal society pursued by the public through the ages. All the problems in a harmonious society must be attributed to or inseparable from the rule of law. Law plays a vital role in building a harmonious society [1]. Democracy and the rule of law play an overall role in all the elements of a harmonious society, not just in one aspect or part. Not only is a harmonious society necessarily a democratic society and a society ruled by law, but other elements of a harmonious society can be truly realized only in a society that believes in democracy and upholds the rule of law. However, there are inevitably social contradictions and social conflicts in any society [2]. Therefore, in order to build a harmonious socialist society, we must properly coordinate the interests of all parties and resolve social conflicts in a timely manner. The construction of a socialist harmonious society must rely on the promotion and protection of the legal system. Law is the center of the social relationship regulator and plays an important role in the process of building a socialist harmonious society. Only when a society has a perfect computer simulation legal mechanism and has formed a legal system capable of dealing with complicated social relations and social contradictions can it make a virtuous circle of society and form a stable and orderly social good state. Therefore, improving the legal mechanism of computer simulation plays an important role in building a socialist harmonious society.
2. The Important Role of Perfecting Legal Mechanism in Building a Harmonious Society

In a harmonious society, law is the norm to guide social behavior, the rule to construct social order, the criterion to adjudicate social disputes, the means to maintain social peace, and the guarantee to realize social justice [4]. Social relations are the prerequisite for the existence of human rights. Human rights and their systems and ideas are all influenced and restricted by the social, economic, political and cultural systems of a certain historical period. People are both ends and means. Legal aid is not an end but a means. All activities carried out by legal aid are people-centered and closely related to people. It provides a legal platform for the development of vulnerable groups themselves. To build a socialist harmonious society, we must perfect the socialist legal system, build a socialist country ruled by law, and give full play to the important role of the rule of law in promoting, realizing and ensuring social harmony [5]. Contradictions among the people and other social contradictions have been properly handled, and social fairness and justice have been effectively maintained and realized. Honesty and fraternity means that the whole society helps each other, is honest and trustworthy, and all the people are equal, friendly and harmonious. The legal system takes fairness and justice and equality before the law as its basic value orientation. The socialist harmonious society should take the law as the basic criterion to regulate social relations. Under the protection of the law, the people are the masters of the country, fully develop the democratic spirit, and realize the harmonious coexistence between people and between people and nature.

A harmonious society is a legal society that regards the legal system as the basic norm to regulate social relations. As the unified embodiment of the national will, the legal system is the basic rule to regulate and maintain social order [6]. Therefore, it is required that the formulation of the legal system should take fairness, justice and human rights as its basic value orientation, and at the same time, democracy should be fully developed. At present, although all kinds of relations in our country are basically harmonious, the political situation is basically stable and the society is basically harmonious, there are still many deep-seated contradictions and problems that affect social harmony. The legal system is an indispensable and important means. Only by using the legal system to restrict government behavior and standardize government governance can society maintain order and vitality. The modern harmonious society has complicated social division of labor and rich interpersonal relationships. Therefore, it is not only necessary to rely on moral ethics to maintain interpersonal relationships, but also to use legal norms to organize, regulate social relationships and adjust human behavior. The modern harmonious society is paved with a rich legal culture full of democracy and scientific spirit, which is its cultural characteristics. Only when a society is in a stable and united environment can it be rejuvenated and truly harmonious. That is to say, a harmonious society is guaranteed by a well-organized society. Only by ruling by law and restricting government behavior by law can a harmonious society be realized.

3. Main Problems in Legal System Construction in China

At present, Chinese legal system construction is generally harmonious, but Chinese legal system construction itself does exist various disharmonious phenomena. To strengthen the construction of socialist legal system and promote a harmonious society, we must face up to the existing problems in the current legal system construction. Chinese legal system construction mainly has the following problems:

3.1. Legislation lags behind

For many years, the lag of legislation has been a big drawback in the legal construction of our country. Many laws and regulations that have changed over time are still tenaciously standardizing the changed reality with old rules [7]. People cannot exist independently and have joint relations with each other. As everyone's interests may be infringed by others or everyone may infringe on the interests of others or social organizations, the law is needed to adjust them, which leads to human rights problems. There is a lack of legislation concerning the protection of farmers' interests, and the legislation of the rural old-age pension, medical care and agricultural insurance systems is seriously lagging behind, especially in the regulation of villagers' autonomy. For example, the laws and regulations concerning the election of village committees are unclear. Legislation to protect farmers' democratic rights at the village level is lacking. It is the inevitable result of unfair resource allocation and an effective measure for the rational allocation of resources. People are the most active and decisive force in productivity, and human resources are the most important resources. This requires us not only to adhere to the people's congress system, but also to continuously improve and innovate the people's congress system. The construction of a harmonious society puts forward higher requirements for people's congresses at all levels and will also promote the perfection and innovation of the people's congress system. It has the characteristics of surpassing the interests of individuals and groups, neutrality and objectivity, so it has impartiality. It can become a unified standard that all members of society abide by.

3.2. Unfair legislation.
Unfair legislation exists objectively. The shadow of departmental interests and local protection is still preserved in the outdated legal system. It is projected on the practical activities of today's new legal system construction. Vulnerable groups, mainly poor farmers, migrant workers and unemployed laid-off workers, are difficult to directly participate in the legislative process. Their will to rights cannot be fully expressed. Democratic participation has become an ornament. Today, it can still be the ideological source for us to establish modern human rights theory. Human beings are the masters of society and the spirits of all things. If a country or society cannot affirm and protect the basic rights of human beings due to their natural attributes, then the country or society is difficult to establish and survive [8]. The target of legal aid is the vulnerable group at the bottom of the society. Assistance to this group of people attaches great importance to the decisive factors of productivity. Legal aid is actually a liberation of this part of productivity and a full exploration of the human and intellectual resources of this huge group. Some laws and regulations do not meet the requirements of protecting citizens' legitimate rights and interests. For example, in the recent period of time, due to the constant tragedies caused by violent forced demolition, the "Regulations on the Administration of Urban Housing Relocation" as the basis for the demolition party obviously confuses compensation and expropriation, and confuses administrative legal relations with civil legal relations, leading to the occurrence of infringement of citizens' property rights. Sustained growth is severely constrained by resources, energy and environment. If such problems are not solved for a long time, it will definitely affect social stability and development, and building a harmonious society will become empty talk.

3.3. Judicial injustice.
An unjust judicial decision is worse than many unfair actions. Because these unfair actions only pollute the water flow, while unfair judgments corrupt the water source [9]. Taking coercive measures against the law, perverting the law in adjudicating cases, acquittal of guilty cases, lenient sentences for serious crimes, etc., will cause people to doubt, distrust or even despise the authority of the law. The most important thing in human nature is the right to life, which is the highest interest of human beings and should be a primary human right. It is one of human's instinct and nature to seek benefits and avoid harms, so it is also human's nature to seek welfare and happiness. Under the condition of market economy in the primary stage of socialism, vigorously developing social undertakings will help to strengthen the education of the concept of fairness in the whole society, foster the social responsibility of helping each other and the awareness of fair competition rules among social members, and reduce the polarization between the rich and the poor. In the minds of judicial personnel, "justice", as an unshakable ideal, will always be a beacon guiding judicial personnel to move forward. Apart from justice, there is no interest to seek. A harmonious society is not a society free from contradictions, but a society that can solve contradictions in a timely manner through institutionalization and rule of law. It is a society that respects legal authority and develops in an orderly way. To build a harmonious society, we must establish a dynamic mechanism to prevent, resolve and resolve disputes through democracy and the rule of law.
4. The Legal Mechanism of Building a Socialist Harmonious Society from the Perspective of Computer Simulation

4.1. Constructing the legal mechanism of power restriction.
In the process of national rule of law, one of the main functions of law is to restrict power. Generally speaking, government agencies have the main power of a country. If they do not effectively supervise power, rent-seeking will become more and more rampant [10]. In a sense, politics is an activity in which different political subjects influence, control or exercise state power in order to realize certain interests. Due to the different interest demands and policy propositions of various political subjects, conflicts between political expectations and political goals are bound to arise. The premise for the law to be effective is its openness and transparency, that is, it must be known to the society so that the members of the society know which behaviors can and cannot be done, thus enabling people to have reasonable expectations and adjust their behaviors correctly. To speed up the construction of a clean government, for example, to standardize the administrative procedure law and expose the government's behavior to "sunshine". The national mandatory promotion of leading cadres and family property declaration system, to promote the integrity and self-discipline of the staff of state organs. A harmonious society is not a paradise free of contradictions and conflicts or a stagnant pool of water. The key to a harmonious society is that it has a mechanism to effectively regulate social relations and social contradictions, self-improvement and maintenance of social justice and good social order. In the historical process of legal development, computer simulation legal mechanism has shown increasingly obvious integration function. No matter the public opinion or the ideology and morality, the law does not allow them to exceed the minimum limit set by themselves.

4.2. The legal mechanism of balancing interests promotes the realization of fairness and justice.
Just adjustment of social interest relations is the cornerstone of building a harmonious society. At present, the gap between the rich and the poor in our country is becoming more and more serious. Many rich people are willful when they have money, and their lives are dissolute. Many poor people are sick and look down on them and cannot afford their children to go to school. Each subject has the right to comment, raise objections or even deny other people's political opinions and suggestions. On the premise of identifying with the core values, each subject recognizes the legitimacy of various values, accommodates different voices, and gives mutual respect and recognition to different views. In a certain sense, the distribution of rights and obligations is essentially the distribution of interests. In order to ensure the order of interest relations, the state determines and measures the value of various interests through laws, thus adjusting and ensuring the distribution of interests more effectively.

The main processes of fact-driven and goal-driven reasoning are both matching and operation. In fact-driven reasoning, the matching is the facts in the fact database and the preconditions in the rule base, while in goal-driven reasoning, the matching is the facts to be proved and the facts in the fact database as well as the facts to be proved and the applicable conclusions in the rule base. The production system is mainly composed of production rule base, fact database and control strategy. The structure of each part is shown in Figure 1.

Under any political system, there are political tensions and conflicts, such as development and stability, democracy and efficiency, freedom and equality, the proliferation of civil rights and the concentration of state power, the opposition of various political views and values, etc. It is necessary to establish a computer simulation legal mechanism that can reflect the interest demands in a timely manner, especially to pay attention to the expression of interest demands by vulnerable groups. This is because the vulnerable groups are short of social resources. When their rights and interests are infringed upon, they often feel helpless. If they continue to do so for a long time, they will have a mentality of hating the rich and the world. Therefore, the majority of lawyers give full play to their professional advantages and the functions of legal consultation, legal publicity and mediation, which play a very important role in resolving social conflicts, promoting social stability and building a harmonious society.

4.3. Constructing a legal mechanism to resolve social disputes.

Building a computer simulation legal mechanism to resolve social disputes is the guarantee for building a socialist harmonious society. Ancient thinkers in our country have already realized that law can resolve social disputes. Therefore, to maintain social harmony, in the final analysis, we must adjust people's interests and reflect social fairness. While strengthening the enforcement of laws by administrative organs at all levels, we should improve the internal supervision and restriction mechanism of administrative law enforcement organs, and realize the internal correction of administrative law enforcement organs by establishing administrative law enforcement responsibility system, reviewing law enforcement files, and investigating law enforcement faults. It is necessary to strengthen the legislative work and clarify the rights and obligations of the members of the society, so as to enable all members of the society to exercise their rights, fulfill their obligations and reduce infringement of rights, which is the basis for improving social governance.

Production system is generally composed of general database, production rules and control strategies. The general database in the production system for the application of legal provisions is the fact database of a case, which is used to store the initial basic facts, evidence, intermediate conclusions and applicable legal provisions of a case. Including the constituent elements of the application of legal provisions and the consequences of the application of legal provisions, is an expert database of legal reasoning. The control strategy in the production system for the application of legal terms is a set of programs used to control the operation of legal deductive reasoning. It is a matching program for the application of legal terms and dynamically obtains the results of reasoning. The relationship between the parts is shown in Figure 2.

Figure 2 The legal provisions apply to the main components of the production system

In the legislative process, attention should be paid to the rights and interests of vulnerable groups so that they can also have a platform to express their interests. When the interests of different values conflict, the law chooses the interests with higher value to be protected first, and strictly prohibits infringement of the interests with absolute value. Therefore, a society based on diversity needs to have a unified standard and a unified adjustment mechanism. It cannot be adjusted according to the norms of specific individuals or groups because it varies from person to person, from time to time, and from case to case. Democracy is an effective integration mechanism invented by human beings. Integration means coordination and consideration. Through integration, a normative environment is created in which individual freedom and social unity, individual development and social progress are organically combined.
4.4. Adjust the harmony between human and nature.

Law can also play an important role in realizing the harmony between human and nature, for example, expanding the connotation of traditional justice. Tolerance is a virtue, tolerance is the essential expression of democracy, tolerance is also the only way to a harmonious society. Political tolerance is a sign of political civilization and self-confidence of the ruling party and government. In a democratic system, different opinions, lifestyles and values are tolerant or inclusive of each other. With the gradual deepening of Chinese market economy, various social strata have diversified their income distribution. This diversified distribution pattern will inevitably lead to differences in income. The sharp increase in income disparity will definitely endanger social stability, so social harmony cannot be realized. The traditional view of justice focuses on the distribution and maintenance of interests between people from the perspective of the relationship between people. However, the natural environment and "things" are almost ignored. Many scholars believe that the natural environment and "things" are only external things, not "human beings" and need not be included in the scope of the view of justice. At present, many countries have stipulated environmental rights as a general right of citizens in their constitutions. Our country has not directly stipulated in the constitution that citizens enjoy environmental rights. The socialist harmonious society pursues natural balance. The judicial mechanism under the harmonious society should extend the concept of rights to natural entities. The judicial mechanism based on the socialist harmonious society should safeguard all life, including the survival rights of nature.

5. Summary

Perfecting the legal mechanism of computer simulation and building a harmonious society are interdependent and inseparable. A perfect computer simulation legal mechanism provides guarantee for the construction of a harmonious society. Without a computer simulation legal mechanism suitable for the construction of a harmonious society, the vision of constructing a harmonious society cannot be realized. On the one hand, the law solves social conflicts through its punishment function; on the other hand, it also relieves social rights through its protection mechanism, thus smoothing social conflicts. As an important aspect of the "rule of law", Chinese legal aid system relies on the "rule of virtue" to provide a social moral foundation, while helping to correctly guide the whole society to care for the weak, help the weak and develop the weak. This is the most direct and effective embodiment and destination of the people-oriented concept. The important role played by the legal adjustment mechanism in a harmonious society deserves our careful study. In the process of building a socialist harmonious society, it is urgent to establish an effective legal adjustment mechanism.
