The Reform of the Hirmologion by the Russian Old Ritualists

Aleksandr Andreev
Department of Classical Languages, St. Petersburg Theological Academy of the Russian Orthodox Church, Russia
aleksandr.andreev@gmail.com

Abstract

In this paper, the author presents new evidence for the reform of notated manuscripts undertaken by the Russian Old Ritualists (Old Believers) in the second half of the 17th century. The reform was independent of, though contemporaneous with the reform of notated manuscripts undertaken by those who agreed with the liturgical reforms of Patriarch Nikon. The author shows that the purpose of the Old Ritualist reform was to align the text of the notated Hirmologion with the grammatical rules codified in the Grammar of Meletii Smotritskii, as republished in Moscow in 1648, and with the text of the non-notated liturgical books printed at the Moscow Print Yard prior to the tenure of Patriarch Nikon.

Keywords

Church Slavonic – Meletii Smotritskii – Patriarch Nikon – liturgical reform – hirmos – Hirmologion – Znamenny Chant – Old Believers – Old Ritualists

1 Introduction

The liturgical reforms enacted in the Russian Church in the middle and second half of the 17th century took place against the background of what N. Uspenskii has called “a profound crisis in Russian liturgical music,”¹ which culminated by the turn of the 18th century in a sudden transition from ancient styles of monophonic and polyphonic chant to the new part-song style of church music. The reform of liturgical chantbooks and the liturgical music that they recorded began with a program to eliminate khomony – the practice when archaic “yers”, which were vocalized during singing performance, are recorded using the Cyrillic graphemes о and е – and to introduce the narechnoye style of singing, in which archaic “yers” are not vocalized and the graphemes representing them have been removed. Since the process of eliminating khomony began even before the patriarchate of Nikon, the position of Old Ritualists on the use of khomony varied: many of the key Old Ritualist leaders, such as Archpriest Avvakum and the Denisov brothers, rejected khomony and supported narechnoye singing. On the other hand, the influential monks of the Solovetsky Monastery supported khomony. The difference in opinion may be observed up to today, with the Priested Old Ritualists and some Priestless Old Ritualists using chantbooks corrected for narechnoye singing in their liturgy, while most Priestless Old Ritualists continuing to practice liturgical chant with khomony.

¹ Н. Д. Успенский, Древнерусское певческое искусство [N. Uspenskii, Medieval Russian Choral Arts], Moscow, 1971, p. 317.

The orthography of the narechnoye chantbooks used by the Priested Old Ritualists has been studied by scholars, but the text itself has not been investigated so far. Yet we have reason to suspect that a reform of the chantbooks undertaken in the second half of the 17th century was not limited to matters of orthography and orthoepy alone. For example, the mid-17th century polemical treatise “Skazanie o razlichnykh eresiakh i khuleniiakh na Gospoda Boga i na Prechistuiu Bogoroditsu, soderzhimykh ot nevedeniia v znamennykh knigakh” identifies both khomony and various textual differences between the text of

---

2 For a general introduction to the Nikonian reforms, see P. Meyendorff, Russia, Ritual, and Reform: The Liturgical Reforms of Nikon in the 17th Century, Yonkers, N.Y.: Saint Vladimir’s Seminary Press, 1991, p. 27-83; and T. Pott, La réforme liturgique byzantine: étude du phénomène de l’évolution non-spontannée de la liturgie byzantine, Rome: Centro Liturgico Vincenziano, 2000, p. 214-222.

3 On khomony (“khomoniiia”), see J. Harri, St. Petersburg Court Chant and the Tradition of Eastern Slavic Church Singing. Turku: University of Turku, 2011, p. 51-55.

4 Б. А. Успенский, Архаическая система церковнославянского произношения [B. Uspenskii, The Archaic System of Church Slavonic Pronunciation]. Moscow, 1968, p. 39-40, 61-65.

5 The issue of khomony was first identified by прот. Д. Разумовский, Церковное пение в России: (Опыт историко-технического изложения): Из уроков, читанных в Консерватории при Московском музыкальном обществе, профессором консерватории и членом Константинопольского музыкального общества, Дим. Разумовским [Archpriest D. Razumovskii, Church Singing in Russia: (A Historical and Technical Essay): Materials from Lectures Read at the Conservatory at Moscow’s Musical Society by Conservatory Professor and Member of the Constantinopolitan Musical Society Dim. Razumovskii]. Moscow, 1867, p. 79-83; for an up-to-date bibliography, see Т. Ф. Владышевская и Б. А. Успенский, “Истинноречие,” in: Православная энциклопедия, Т. 27. [T. Vladyshevskaia and B. Uspenskii, “Istinnorechiie,” in: Orthodox Encyclopedia, vol. 27]. Moscow, 2011, pp. 716-719.
the notated chant manuscripts and the text of non-notated liturgical books printed at the Moscow Print Yard as defects that need to be corrected.6

In this paper, I consider the text of the Hirmologion, a liturgical chantbook containing, chiefly, the texts (accompanied in all of the sources studied here by the neumatic Znamenny musical notation) of hirmoi – hymns based on the nine Biblical Odes and used as poetic and musical models for other texts of the Canon sung at Matins according to the Byzantine Rite.7 In a previous paper, I provided a typology of the Znamenny notated Hirmologia of the 17th century.8 Among the manuscripts reviewed, I identified a group of notated Hirmologia containing the text of hirmoi without khomony but in the pre-Nikonian re-daction, that is, not influenced by the Nikonian editio princeps of the Slavonic Hirmologion printed in Moscow in 1657.9 I termed these manuscripts “non-Nikonian reformed Hirmologia”. Presently five such copies are known to me; they are presented in Table 1. All of these manuscripts may be dated, on the basis of watermarks or inscriptions, to the second half of the 17th century, and all contain Znamenny Notation bearing cinnabar marks (Type B notation according to the classification of Gardner) or cinnabar marks and priznaki (Type A notation).10 While the text of these manuscripts generally agrees with the text of the “archaic” Slavonic Hirmologion as given in the 16th century manuscripts edited by Hannick,11 one also finds certain changes that agree in part with the text of hirmoi in the pre-Nikonian liturgical books printed in Moscow under patriarchs Joasaph I (1634-1640) and Joseph (1642-1652). The same redaction of the text of the hirmoi is also found in 18th and 19th century manuscript

6 As given by Н. А. Никольская, «Сказание» инока Евфросина и певческая книжная справа XVII века [N. A. Nikol’skaia, The “Skazaniie” of Monk Evfrosin and the Reform of Musical Chantbooks in the 17th Century]. Unpublished baccalaureate thesis at St. Petersburg State Conservatory, 2008, p. 84. Available online at: <http://znamen.ru/PEECTP/09a_Nikolskaja.pdf>.
7 For an introduction to the history of this liturgical book, see M. Velimirović, “The Byzantine Heirmos and Heirmologion,” in: Gattungen der Musik in Einzeldarstellungen, Bern, München: Francke Verlag, 1973, pp. 192-244, and S. Harris, “The ‘Kanon’ and the Heirmologion,” Music and Letters, 85.2 (2004), pp. 175-197.
8 A. Andreev, “Toward a Typology of the 17th Century Slavonic Notated Hirmologia,” Orientalia Christiana Periodica 85 (2019), pp. 481-503.
9 А. А. Андреев, "Венецианские печатные Ирмологии XVI-XVII вв. и книжная справа в Москве," Христианское чтение [Idem., “The Venetian Printed Hirmologia of the 16th–17th Centuries and the Reform of Liturgical Books in Moscow,” Christian Reading], 2017 (5), pp. 98-109 (DOI 10.2441/1894-5574-2017-0097).
10 J. Gardner, Russian Church Singing. Volume 1. Orthodox Worship and Hymnography. Trans. by V. Morosan. Yonkers, N.Y.: St. Vladimir’s Seminary Press, 1989, pp. 114-115.
11 C. Hannick, Das Altslavische Hirmologion: Edition und Kommentar. Freiburg im Breisgau: Weiher Verlag, 2006.
Hirmologia produced at the Old Rite literary center at Guslitsa and in the two printed editions of the notated Hirmologion undertaken by the Russian Old Ritualists: volume 6 of the Krug tserkovnogo drevnego znamennogo penia published in 1884-1885 in St. Petersburg through the patronage of Arsenii Morozov and the Irmosy tserkovnogo znamennogo penia published in 1908 at the press of Lazar Kalashnikov in Kiev. The textual changes in this “reformed non-Nikonian” redaction of the Hirmologion vis-à-vis the “archaic” redaction reveal the extent to which the Old Ritualists themselves were willing to “correct” liturgical books and also provide a better context for understanding the liturgical reform undertaken by Patriarch Nikon and the “correctors” of the Moscow Print Yard.

| Shelf code      | No. of Hirmoi | Dating         |
|-----------------|---------------|----------------|
| NLR O.I.508     | 671           | After 1660     |
| RSL coll. 379 #36 | 675           | 1660s or '70s  |
| RSL coll. 379 #55 | 677           | 1660s or '70s  |
| NLR O.I.38      | 630           | Before 1668    |
| NLR O.I.217     | 670           | Before 1691    |

*NLR = National Library of Russia, St. Petersburg
RSL = Russian State Library, Moscow

I now proceed to describe the changes introduced by scribes into the “non-Nikonian reformed” redaction of the Hirmologion, for simplicity taking 12 The literary culture of the Russian Old Ritualists still lacks an adequate study in English. For information on the Old Ritualist literary center in Guslitsa, see E. A. Ageeva, "Гуслица," in: Православная энциклопедия, Т. 13 [E. Ageeva, "Guslitsa," in: Orthodox Encyclopedia, vol. 13]. Moscow, 2006, pp. 503-509; on the printing of chantbooks by Old Ritualists, see Е.Ю. Шевчук и И.В.С., “Издательства и издания духовно-музыкальные (Старообрядческие церковнопевческие издания),” in: Православная энциклопедия, Т. 21 [E. Shevchiuk and I.V.S., “Publishers and Publications of Church Music (Old Ritualist Musical Publications),” in: Orthodox Encyclopedia, vol. 21]. Moscow, 2009, pp. 579-583; Е.Ю. Шевчук и Е.А. Агеева, “Калашников Лазарь Филиппович,” in: Православная энциклопедия, Т. 29 [E. Shevchiuk and E. Ageeva, “Kalashnikov Lazar’ Filippovich,” in: Orthodox Encyclopedia, vol. 29]. Moscow, 2012, pp. 432-434.

The Reform of the Hirmologion by the Russian Old Ritualists

In the realm of morphology, the reformed text regularly uses the case endings -и, -ы instead of the case endings -ѧ, -ѧ for the gen. sg., nom. pl., and acc. pl. forms of nouns that decline according to the soft and mixed varieties of the second declension. This norm was codified in the Grammar of 1648 (f. 99r-101r), but not yet in the Grammar of Meletii Smotritskii, and was being introduced into the printed liturgical books at the Moscow Print Yard already in the 1640s for the purpose of resolving homonymy between the nominative and oblique cases.

13 In the tables that follow, the hirmoi are numbered according to the system employed by Hannick, op. cit.; for ease of reference, I also provide the number of the corresponding Greek hirmos according to the system first proposed by J. Raasted, "Observations on the Manuscript Tradition of Byzantine Music, 1: A List of Heirmos Call-Numbers, based on Eustratiades's Edition of the Heirmologion," Cahiers de l'Institut du Moyen-Âge Grec et Latin, 1969 (1), pp. 1-12. The "archaic" redaction is quoted as given by Hannick, op. cit. The "reformed non-Nikonian" redaction is quoted as recorded in the manuscripts listed in Table 1 and in the printed editions Krug and Irmosy; where discrepancies exist between these sources, they are indicated in footnotes. The following sigla are used for the printed liturgical books (the number in parentheses indicates the number of this edition in the catalog of А. С. Зернова, Книги кирилловской печати, изданные в Москве в XVI-XVII веках. Сводный каталог [A. Zernova, Cyrillic Books Printed in Moscow in the 16th–17th Centuries. A Consolidated Catalog]. Moscow, 1958): MSept1644 – Минея, сентябрь. Moscow, 1644 (#173); MDec1636 – Минея, декабрь. Moscow, 1636 (#128); MDec1645 – Минея, декабрь. Moscow, 1645 (#177); MJani1622 – Минея, январь. Moscow, 1622 (#43); MJani1644 – Минея, январь. Moscow, 1644 (#171); MFeb1646 – Минея, февраль. Moscow, 1646 (#183); MAug1630 – Минея, август. Moscow, 1630 (#76); MAug1646 – Минея, август. Moscow, 1646 (#187); TL1640 – Триодь постная. Moscow, 1640 (#153); TL1642 – Триодь постная. Moscow, 1642 (#162); TL1650 – Триодь постная. Moscow, 1650 (#224); TF1653 – Триодь цветная. Moscow, 1653 (#125); TF1648 – Триодь цветная. Moscow, 1648 (#208); Oct1631 – Октоих. Moscow, 1631 (#86); Oct1638 – Октоих. Moscow, 1638 (#142); Oct1649 – Октоих. Moscow, 1649 (#214).

14 I call this the second declension, as in modern grammars of Church Slavonic (cf. Archbishop Alypy (Gamanovich), Grammar of the Church Slavonic Language, Trans. by Archpriest J. Shaw, Jordanville, N.Y.: Holy Trinity Monastery, 2001, pp. 76-78), even though Meletii Smotritskii calls it the first declension (cf. Е. А. Кузьминова, Грамматики Лаурентии Зизании и Мелетия Смотритского. [E. Kuzʹminova, The Grammars of Lavrentii Zizanii and Meletii Smotritskii]. Moscow, 2000, pp. 170-184).

15 Ibid., pp. 176-177.

16 See the discussion in 1648 г. под ред. Е. А. Кузьминовой [Grammar of 1648, ed. by E. Kuzʹminova]. Moscow, 2007, pp. 561-562.
Another common change is the introduction of possessive pronouns instead of enclitic pronouns in the dative case. The Grammar of Meletii Smotritskii indicates that the enclitic pronouns "мі, ты, сі" and the possessive pronouns "мої, твої, свої" are equivalent. In some instances, the full form of the possessive pronouns was used already in the liturgical books printed under Patriarch Filaret (1619-1633), or was introduced into the liturgical books printed under Patriarch Joasaph I:

In a number of instances where the text in the notated Hirmologion was changed in favor of the text in the printed liturgical books, equivalent syntactical constructions were used. Thus, the genitive of possession was changed to a possessive adjective or vice-versa, a possessive adjective was changed to a genitive of possession:

| No. | Archaic          | Reformed non-Nikonian | Printed pre-Nikonian |
|-----|------------------|-----------------------|----------------------|
| Αη¹ | дѣти израиля     | дѣти израиляевы       | дѣти израилявы      |
|     | = 7              |                       | (Octi631, p. 1, f. 27r; Octi649, p. 1, f. 38r) |
| Αη⁶ | тлю смертнѫюю   | тлю смерти           | тлю смерти          |
|     | = 32             |                       | (MAug1630, f. 261v) → тлю смерти (MAug1646, f. 26iv) |

Other syntactical changes include changes in word order, the usage of adverbs rather than adjectives, and differing attempts to translate the Greek article into Church Slavonic:

| No. | Archaic          | Reformed non-Nikonian | Printed pre-Nikonian |
|-----|------------------|-----------------------|----------------------|
| Αε´4 | ракъна же отъцѹ | ракъна ὁμι χε       | ракъна ὁμι χε      |
|     | = 74             |                       | (MDec1636, f. 269v; MDec1645, f. 394r) |
| Αε´5 | невредно къпиаше | невреждєнъ копиаше   | невреждєнъ копиаше |
|     | = 30             |                       | (MAug1630, f. 259v; MAug1646, f. 259v) |
|     | Cf.: ἀσινὴς ἐβοὰ |                      | Cf.: ἀσινὴς ἐβοὰ.18 |
| Αε´5 | тємпѣνъмъ и къ | свѣтимъ въ тмѣкъ и свѣн | свѣтимъ въ тмѣкъ и свѣн |
|     | = 29             |                       | (MAug1630, f. 258v) |
|     | Cf.: τοῖς ἐν σκοτει καὶ σκια.19 |          |                     |

In a number of instances, the “archaic” text of the notated Hirmologion contained a translation error. The error was either absent from the text of the printed liturgical books, or had been corrected in the liturgical books during the patriarchates of Joasaph I or Joseph:

---

18 Εἱρμολόγιον, ἐκδιδόμενον ὑπὸ μητροπ. Σωφρονίου Εὐστρατιάδου [Hirmologion, published by Metrop. Sophronius Eustratiades]. Chennevières-sur-Marne, 1932, p. 3.

19 Ἀὐτό splitted
Andreev

No. Archaic Reformed non-Nikonian Printed pre-Nikonian
Aδʹ 1
= 3

isc teke izydete
israileva
prakozglashawec katago
Cf.: ex sou
exelesveshbi tou
‘Istrael prouaneffwe
(Oct1631, p. 1, f. 13r) →
(Oct1638, p. 1, f. 12v)

Aζʹ 9
talo sloyziti
moscikinskym y
cglasimem
Cf.: eikoni latoruev
mosytskih symfoniav syaqkalomene laouc.20

Aγʹ 9
talo sloyziti
moscikinom y
cglasimem
(Oct1648, f. 256v)

Sometimes a syntactical difference between the “archaic” notated Hirmologion and the printed liturgical books reflected different versions of the underlying Greek text, which may also be reflected in the Slavonic manuscript tradition. While it is tempting to see a reliance on Greek sources behind such changes, we have little evidence that “correctors” at the Print Yard had access to Greek sources prior to the patriarchate of Nikon.

No. Archaic Reformed non-Nikonian Printed pre-Nikonian
Aαʹ 12
= 50

bogestvennyi probozradi
... kresty tkon
Cf.: O theiotatoc proetupwse ... ton Stoauron sou.23
But: H, G, Sp, and Venetian Hirmologia have tou Stoauron.24

20 Awtodi, p. 1.
21 Awtodi, p. 4.
22 However, TL1640 (on f. 261r) has the reading kresty tkon.
23 Awtodi, p. 5.
24 The sigla for Greek manuscripts of the Hirmologion are those adopted by the MMV series and Velimirović, op. cit.: O – BNF Coislin 220 (end of the 11th or beginning of the 12th
The introduction of such changes into the text of the reformed Hirmologion, however, was not consistent. For example, in a number of instances the use of enclitic pronouns remained, or the word order continued to differ from the printed text. Quite possibly such differences may be explained by discrepancies within the printed books themselves – in cases when an hirmos occurred in more than one printed liturgical book, the scribes had to choose one version of the text:

| No. | Archaic | Reformed non-Nikonian | Printed pre-Nikonian |
|-----|---------|-----------------------|---------------------|
| Αγ’7 | Ἰζ γροβα ὀδυγηδενα Ἰζ γροβα ὀδυγηδεναι | Ἰζ γροβα ὀδυγηδεναι | (TC1635, f. 237v) → Ἰζ γροβα ὀδυγηδεναι |
| = 43 | ΧριΣτα | ΧριΣτα | (TC1648, f. 204v) |

Cf.: ἐκ ταφου ὁμβρησαντος Χριστου.25
But: O, H, G, Ku, Sp, and Si have ὁμβρησαντα Χριστον.

The choice was not always obvious: in the last two cases, the text in the Hirmologion remains unchanged because it agrees with the text in the printed Octoechos, despite the fact that the hirmoi in question belong to the Nativity century; H – Athos Iveron 470 (middle of the 12th century, see photographic reproduction by C. Høeg, Hirmologium Athoum (Monumenta Musicæ Byzantinae, 2), Copenhagen, 1938); G – Grottaferrata E.Y.11 (beginning of the 13th century, see the publication by L. Tardo, Hirmologium Cryptense: Codex Cryptensis E.Y.11 (Monumenta Musicæ Byzantinae, 3), Roma, 1951); Sp – NLR Greek 121 (dated 1322); Ku – Sinai Greek 1256 (dated 1328); Si – Sinai Greek 929 (11th century, OdO structure). For the Venetian editions, I use Εἱρμολόγιον, Ἐνετισιν, παρὰ Άντωνιῳ τῷ Πινέλλῳ, 1603, here on f. 4v.

25 Εἱρμολόγιον ... ὑπὸ μητροπ. Σώφρονιον Εὐστρατιάδον, p. 5.
Canon by St. Cosmas of Maiuma, so we would expect them to agree with the text in the printed Menaion. We also find instances where the text has been changed to agree with the printed Menaion, in this particular case – in spite of the tendency to substitute the second person singular perfect for the aorist, a practice that probably originated on Mt. Athos in the 14th century and spread to Muscovy as early as during the tenure of Metropolitan Cyprian at the end of the 14th century:26

| No. | Archaic | Reformed non-Nikonian | Printed pre-Nikonian |
|-----|---------|-----------------------|----------------------|
| Г3'3 | въ църкви славы | въ церкви славы | ти | въ църкви славы | ти |
| = 859 | ти ИАБИСА | ИАБИСА | |

The process of reforming the text of the printed liturgical books during the patriarchate of Joseph must have been quite chaotic, since the same text may occur in different redactions in different liturgical books or even within one liturgical book. The text of the reformed Hirmologion may reflect one of the redactions found in the printed books:

| No. | Archaic | Reformed non-Nikonian | Printed pre-Nikonian |
|-----|---------|-----------------------|----------------------|
| Г3'2 | в зак annonces | в законнѣй | сѣни писаніи | в законнѣя сѣни писаніи |
| = 864 | сѣни писаніи | сѣни писаніи | |

---

26 On this, see: Т. И. Афанасьева и М. Г. Шарихина, “Употребление перфекта 2-го лица ед. числа вместо аориста: к вопросу о времени становления грамматической нормы,” Древняя Русь. Вопросы медиевистики [T. Afanasyeva and M. Sharikhina, “Usage of the Perfect instead of the Aorist in the Second Person Singular: on the Issue of the Establishment of this Grammatical Norm,” Drevnyaya Rus’. Voprosy Medievistiki] 67:1 (2017), pp. 102-109.
3 Lexical Changes in the Text of the Hirmoi

In addition to changes in syntax, we can also observe lexical changes in the text of the hirmoi. This usually involves the usage of a different synonym to translate the underlying Greek word, with the “reformed” redaction following the lexical usage of the printed liturgical books:

| No. | Archaic                  | Reformed non-Nikonian | Printed pre-Nikonian          |
|-----|--------------------------|-----------------------|--------------------------------|
| Aα‘5 | преѹкрашена               | преѹкрашена           | предкрашена ескіємно славою   |
|     | εοѱиєо славою            | εοѱиєкенюо славою     | (MAug1646, f. 257r)           |
| Aζ‘6 | стражетъ іако            | стражетъ іако смртєнъ | стражєєю ѵікв слєртєна       |
|     | Cf.: пѧсьє іє Ѹє Ѹєгєсъ. |                      | (TC1648, f. 208r)            |
| Aζ‘5 | огнь ογκо                 | огнь ογκо ωροςўше     | οгнь οгкв ѵрміємъ            |
|     | прохлддгашє               |                      | (MAug1646, f. 260v)          |
|     | Cf.: тд мєн пѫр ѓдроѕіє. |                      |                               |
| Aη‘1 | добротою                  | добротою еллгєєєтїѧ   | добротою елєгєєєтїѧ          |
|     | еллгєєєїѧ                 |                      | (Octti638, p. 1, f. 26v)     |
|     | Cf.: τѡ Ѹъллє тђς         |                      |                               |
|     | еўєевєєсъ.                |                      |                               |

In some instances, the text in the “archaic” Hirmologion contained an erroneous translation, and this error was corrected by introducing the reading from the printed liturgical books. Such errors typically were caused by the confusion of Greek homonyms or paronyms:

| No. | Archaic | Reformed non-Nikonian | Printed pre-Nikonian |
|-----|---------|-----------------------|----------------------|
| Aζ‘3 | морєскіє зєбръ               | морєскіє зєбръ іаковъ | морєскіє зєбръ ієковъ |
|     | едєιєнєо приатъ             | приатъ               | пєієтъ (MDec1645, f. 396v) |
|     | Cf.: ієваліє θђр ієвъ ѓдєєатє. |                      |                      |

27 Εἱρμολόγιον ... υπὸ μητρόπ. Σωφρονίου Εὐστρατιάδου, p. 5.
28 Αὐστόδι, p. 3.
29 Αὐστόδι, p. 3.
30 Irmosy (f. 21v) reads добротою еллгєєєтїѧ, but Krug (f. 475v) reads добротою елєгєєєтїѧ.
31 Εἱρμολόγιον ... υπὸ μητρόπ. Σωφρονίου Εὐστρατιάδου, p. 1.
32 Αὐστόδι, p. 6.
Although in the last example, it is actually the text in the “archaic” Hirmologion that was correct.

While in many instances the text in the printed books remains stable, in some instances lexical changes were being introduced into the printed books during the patriarchate of Joseph:

Lexical differences did exist between different printed liturgical books as well. In such cases, the “reformed” Hirmologion often agrees with the text in the last version of the Octoechos printed under Patriarch Joseph:

---

33 Thus in the 17th century “reformed non-Nikonian” manuscripts; but the Krug and Irmosy have сынь сынь.
34 Αὐτόθι, p. 37.
35 Of the sources consulted, NLR O.1.508 (on f. 22v) has ЕЛАГОДАТЬ.
36 Εἰρμολόγιον ... υπὸ μητροπ. Σωφρονίου Εὐστρατίαδου, p. 7-8.
37 Αὐτόθι, p. 5.
Though in the last case we see a conflation of the readings in the Octoechos and the Menaion.

As with differences in syntax, lexical differences could exist not only between different editions of the printed liturgical books, but also within the same edition. In the following example, the text in the Hirmologion remains unchanged, despite the various readings that come up in the printed liturgical books:38

---

38 For a discussion of the translation of the Greek verb δορυφορέω ("to attend as a body-guard") and its derivatives into Church Slavonic, see A. Andreev, The Reform of the Hirmologion in Moscow in the 17th Century. Unpublished kandidat teologii dissertation, vol. 2, pp. 82-83. Available online at: <https://go.spbu.ru/19a3001>.
The “correctors” who worked at the Moscow Print Yard knew that the text of the printed liturgical books often disagreed with the text of the notated chant manuscripts. This is evident from one example in the Octoechos of 1649, where the reading спасению виновенъ, which also occurs in the two previous editions of the Octoechos, remains, but the marginal note а не пowość is introduced (on f. 150r), indicating that the text should not be sung as in the “archaic” notated manuscripts. In the “reformed” manuscripts of the Hirmologion, the reading from the Octoechos was introduced:

Finally, in two instances we find lexical changes introduced into the text of the “reformed” Hirmologion that do not occur in the liturgical books printed in Moscow before Patriarch Nikon:

Note that the reverse change избавлышемꙋ → изменьшемꙋ is
No. Archaic Reformed non-Nikonian Printed pre-Nikonian made by the Nikonian scribes in the proof copy of the Hirmologion of 1657 (SHM Syn. 762, f. 2r).

\[ \text{Αδ’} \quad \text{ροδα ωελκευα} \]
\[ = 76 \quad \text{ωελκευείε} \]
\[ \text{Cf.: Πένους βροτείου τὴν ἀνάπλασιν.}^{40} \]

4 Discussion

Two conclusions follow from the examples presented in this paper, one methodological, the other historical. In terms of the methodology of describing East Slavic notated chant manuscripts from the 17th century and onward, it is evident that noting the presence or absence of khomon in a manuscript does not provide sufficient information about it. Furthermore, the use of the terms “razdel’norechie” and “novoe istinnorechie”, which, first introduced by Archpriest D. Razumovskii, have become common, should be avoided. The mere absence of khomon (“novoe istinnorechie”) does not tell us if a manuscript was intended for use by those who accepted the Nikonian reform or rejected it. Instead, a chant manuscript lacking khomon should be described as “reformed Nikonian” or “reformed non-Nikonian”. For an Hirmologion, this is done by considering the ordering of the hirmoi and checking if the text conforms (fully) with the Nikonian editio princeps or (in part) with the liturgical books printed in Moscow before Patriarch Nikon. So far, a typology for the other chantbooks used in the second half of the 17th century has not been developed, but it is quite possible that they reveal a similar dependency on the printed books.

The second conclusion is historical: despite the accepted stereotypes, a closer examination of the liturgical chantbooks demonstrates that at least some Old Ritualists operated fully within the spirit of linguistic reform characteristic of Muscovite Russia in the 17th century. The reform touched upon aspects of Church Slavonic grammar reflected in the influential Grammar of Meletii Smotritskii, published in Vievis in 1618-1619, and its later reprint, with some modifications, in Moscow as the Grammar of 1648. It also attempted to resolve discrepancies between the text of notated manuscripts and the text of the printed liturgical books. The goals pursued by the Nikonian scribes were similar. The main difference is that for the Nikonian reformers, it was the Greek books printed in Venice that were viewed as authoritative, while for the Old Ritualists, the authoritative source was found in the Slavonic books printed in Moscow before the Nikonian reform.

---

40 Αὐτόθι, p. 7.

The reform undertaken by the Old Ritualist scribes, however, was neither complete, nor comprehensive. In many instances discrepancies between the notated Hirmologion and the non-notated printed liturgical books remained, including in the case of hirmoi that had undergone change in the printed liturgical books edited in the 1630s and ‘40s. The reform was thus somewhat haphazard and, while treating the pre-Nikonian books as authoritative, the scribes must have been somewhat skeptical of their content. This brings us to the question of the reform of the pre-Nikonian printed books themselves, which, with the exception of some recent studies of their orthography, remains a badly neglected area of research. A thorough comparison of the text of various pre-Nikonian printed editions is needed in order to reveal the extent of a liturgical reform in Russia in the decades prior to the tenure of Patriarch Nikon, as well as the methods used and sources consulted by the “correctors” of the Moscow Print Yard.

Acknowledgement

This paper is based on a report given at the International Conference “Liturgy as Practice, Space, and Theory in Eastern Christianities”, 1-4 October, 2019, Kirillov, Russia.

41 See, С. М. Кусмауль, “Книжная справа 40-х годов XVII века,” [S. Kusmaul, “Book Correction in the 40s of the 17th Century”] Slověne = Словѣне. International Journal of Slavic Studies, 2014 (1), pp. 72-101, and the bibliography therein.