I. Introduction

Teaching Indonesian language in formal education is not only about the Indonesian language but also the learning process in the classroom that gives students the ability and skills to appreciate literature through a process that relates to producing literary works with what students learn. Literature as a reflection of the socio-cultural conditions of the nation must be passed on to its young generation (Wiwita, 2020). School is an institution for formal learning and teaching which is expected to be able to provide guidance and development for teaching language and literature for students. The main target in teaching literature, especially drama, is school because school is a place or place to instill life values that are not only looking for meaning but also giving meaning to literary works created by the writers concerned. Hence, his insistence that concepts both ‘literature’ and ‘criticism’ were forms of a class specialization and control of a general social practice, and of a class limitation of the question” (Williams in Gaeini, 2019).

Atmazaki in his book Theory and Applied Literature (1990: 31) explains that what determines a literary work is called drama, namely dialogue. Literary works of drama are full of dialogue between characters that occurs between more than two characters. In line with Atmazaki’s opinion, Sumardjo and Saini in their book Appreciation of Literature (1997: 31) also agree that drama is a literary work whose stories are expressed by dialogue between characters but as literary works, drama is only temporary because drama scripts are written as a basis for staging. In junior high school education, the curriculum used is the 2013 curriculum in which there are basic competencies that become the competency standards of students in understanding the elements of drama in the form of performances or scripts, to be precise in Basic Competence 3.15 Identifying the elements of drama (traditional and modern) presented in the form of a stage or a script. Through this learning, students are expected to be able to understand the elements contained in a drama script, especially the intrinsic elements of a drama script.
Based on the author’s observations are of the grade VIII Indonesian student handbook, which in the book only includes modern drama scripts. Modern and traditional drama scripts have differences, for example in language style and diction. In this study, the writer offers a traditional drama script as teaching material, namely the Pawang Ternalem drama script. The writer chose the drama script because the story of Pawang Ternalem originated from Karo Land, North Sumatra. In addition, the drama script Pawang Ternalem is also one of the oral literary works that deserves to be preserved.

According to Wiyanto in his book Skilled in Drama (in Bangun, 2018: 9) etymologically the word drama comes from the Greek word dram which means "movement" and draomai which means "to do, to act, or to act" (Kosasih, 2017: 240). In contrast to Wiyanto’s opinion, Ahmadi (in Endraswara, 2011: 11) said that drama comes from the Greek (Ancient Greek) drau which means doing (action) or doing something. Drama is an imitation of human life that is projected on the stage. Kosasih (2017: 240) argues that drama is a form of literary work that aims to describe life by conveying contention and emotions through actions and dialogue. Actions and dialogue in drama are not much different from actions and dialogues in everyday life. A drama cannot be separated from a drama script. Drama scripts are essays containing stories or plays (Wiyanto in Bangun, 2018: 10). According to Endraswara (2011: 37) a drama script is a work of fiction that has a unity of text and contains a story or play. In the drama script, it is also written how each character expresses his dialogue, whether in a loud, weak or whispered voice.

In a literary work there are elements of its builder. Drama script is built by two important elements, namely intrinsic elements and extrinsic elements. However, this research focuses on the intrinsic elements of a drama script which includes themes, characters and characterizations, plot, setting, language style in dialogue, and mandate (Kemal in Bangun, 2018: 11). In addition to the intrinsic elements of the drama script, this study also analyzes the value of character education contained in the drama script. Character education is placed as the foundation for realizing the vision of national development, namely realizing a society with noble, moral, ethical, cultured, and civilized characters based on the philosophy of Pancasila (Hartono, 2014: 262). The values developed in character education in education units in Indonesia are identified from religion, Pancasila, culture, and national education goals. Based on these four sources, 18 values of character education were identified, namely religious, honest, tolerance, discipline, hard work, creative, independent, democratic, curiosity, national spirit, love for the country, respect for achievement, friendly / communicative, peace-loving, likes reading, cares about the environment, cares about social, and is responsible.

After analyzing the intrinsic elements and the value of character education in the Pawang Ternalem drama script, the benefits of the analysis results as teaching materials will be presented. According to KTSP (Yuliastanti, 2013: 22) teaching materials are a component of a learning system that plays an important role in helping students achieve competency standards and basic competencies. Therefore, it is necessary to develop effective teaching materials to support the learning process. From this opinion it can be concluded that teaching materials are a set of materials designed to assist teachers in the teaching-learning process so that students can achieve the goals of competency standards and also basic competencies. From this explanation, the Pawang Ternalem drama script can be analyzed the intrinsic elements and the value of character education, and find the benefits of the results of this analysis as Indonesian language teaching materials in grade VIII of Junior High School.
II. Research Methods

The research method has an important role in a study. The success of a person in conducting a study will be determined by the method used by the researcher. This study used qualitative research methods. A qualitative research method is a research that produces descriptive data on written and spoken words from people whose behavior can be observed (Bogdan and Taylor in Moleong, 2005: 4).

Data collection techniques are an important job in this research step. The data collection technique used is the type of literature study data collection. Literature study can be interpreted as a step to obtain information from previous research that must be done, regardless of whether the research uses field or laboratory research or in a museum. Library sources can be obtained from books, journals, magazines, research results (thesis or dissertation), and other relevant sources. In this research, the library sources were obtained from an electronic written letter (internet) in the form of the story of Pawang Ternalem which was later converted into a drama script. From this technique, research data obtained in the form of words and sentences as data sourced from the drama Pawang Ternalem.

The data analysis technique used is descriptive data analysis, namely data analysis used to analyze data by describing the data that has been collected as it is without intending to make conclusions that apply to the public (Sugiyono, 2016: 147).

Descriptive data analysis was used to describe the intrinsic elements and value of character education contained in the Pawang Ternalem drama script and the benefits of the drama script as Indonesian language teaching materials in grade VIII of Junior High School.
