Fatanti and Suyadnya (2015) on their article titled ‘Beyond User Gaze: How Instagram Creates Tourism Destination Brand?’ published at Procedia - Social and Behavioral Sciences focus on how Instagram becomes a popular media to promote tourism site in Indonesia. They describe the potential value of Instagram for promoting tourism site in Indonesia, especially in Malang and Bali, and describing how Instagram creating brand destination through photography side. They conclude that UGC through social media helps promoting awareness and creates interest towards a product and destination. Another related article written by Yu and Sun (2019) ‘The Role of Instagram in the UNESCO’s Creativity City of Gastronomy: A Case Study of Macau’ published in Tourism Management uses quantitative content analysis on Instagram to explore the most popular cuisine. They mention that Instagram has an important role to preserve and revive Macau culture of gastronomy. Related Literature  Three Dimension Model of Fairclough

In analyzing data in the form of information related to cultural diversity and tourism in the city of Bandung on feeds on the official Instagram account @ disbudpar.bdg, the authors use the theory of Fairclough (1995) regarding critical discourse analysis (CDA). Critical Discourse Analysis (CDA) is an understanding of discourse that is not merely positioned as the object of language study, which is an understanding of traditional linguistics, but in the context of language as a tool used for certain purposes and practices, including the practice of ideology. Quoting the statement from Fairclough which states that (1995: 2), “CDA is consolidated here as a ‘three-dimensional’ framework where the aim is to map three separates forms of analysis of discourse practice (spoken or written) language text, analysis of discourse practice (processes of text production, distribution and consumption) and analysis of discursive events as instances of sociocultural practice”.

The Critical Discourse Analysis (CDA) model by Fairclough (2001) differentiates the analysis into textual analysis and socio-cultural analysis. The textual analysis aims to give excellent insights about what is in the text, while the sociocultural analysis provides perspectives that are not expressed in the text. He further mentions that sociocultural analysis has various orientations such as economic, political, and cultural aspects that are possible to be simplified in discourse. To apply the CDA model by Fairclough (2001), three interrelated processes of analysis that are connected to three inter-related dimensions of discourse should be performed. Since the authors only focus on instrument linguistics as text analysis, so two others aspects will not be discussed on this paper. The three dimensions can be seen in the following figure.

The word ‘cultural (adjective)’ can be defined ‘relating to the habits, traditions, and beliefs of a society’. The word ‘culture (noun)’ based on Cambridge Dictionary means the way of life, especially the general customs and beliefs, of a particular group of people at a particular time (https://dictionary.cambridge.org/dictionary/english/cultural). The definition of culture has been stated by Koentjaraningrat (2002: 203) which refers to the whole system of ideas, actions, and results of human work in life. According to Harsya Bachtar (1976: 11) culture is elements that include beliefs, knowledge possessed by the community, the language used, the values applied in society and the regulations that apply in it. In addition to providing a definition of culture, Koentjaraningrat, (2002: 203-204) also stated seven (7) cultural elements that are universal, namely language, knowledge systems, social systems or social organizations, systems of living equipment and technology, systems of livelihoods, religious system, and art. All of these cultural elements can be found and developed in society. Standing on the above mentioned coverage, the intangible heritage originates from local cultures in this Nusantara or archipelago, including: tradition, folklore and legend, mother tongue, oral history, creativity (dances, songs, drama shows), adaptability and the uniqueness of the local community (Galla, 2001, p. 12) (in Amalia et all., 2020: 14408).
