INTRODUCTION

Social welfare is a condition of a good standard of living for the community. It is defined by Law No. 11 of 2009 concerning the Basic Provisions of Social Welfare, article 1 paragraph 1 “Social welfare is the condition of fulfilling the material, spiritual, and social needs of citizens so that they can live properly and are able to develop themselves, so that they can carry out their social functions. People who have not received a good standard of living are people who are classified as poor, because meeting their primary needs is still difficult due to various conditions (Adi, 2012). As has been described by Law Number 13 of 2011 concerning Handling of the Poverty, Article 1 paragraph 1 “The poor are people who have absolutely no source of livelihood and/or have sources of livelihood but do not have the ability to meet basic needs that are needed. worthy of the life of himself and/or his family.” Factors causing poverty can be the key to poverty alleviation, one of which is empowerment (Ife, 2013). discussing the concept of empowerment, the researchers present supporting data regarding the reality of the poverty rate in Indonesia by BPS.

The Central Statistics Agency provides data from 2018 to 2020 that Indonesia experienced a decline in poverty rates, the poverty rate in 2018 was 10.35%, in 2019 it was 9.65% and in 2020 it was 9.27%. This certainly has a good impact on the conditions of IPOLEKSOSBUDHANKAM Ideology, Politics, Economics, Social, Culture, Defense, and Security of BPS (2020).

In community empowerment by developing potential in the community, there is a role for government and non-government organizations such as NGOs (Non Government Organizations) in which there are FBOs (Faith Based Organizations) (Baiyeri, 2013). By definition, FBO is an organization based on religion or belief that exists in the midst of society and is based on shared values, ideas, thoughts as well as common goals (Baiyeri, 2013). Austin (2002) considers that religious-based organizations also have several points of view such as history, organizational character, organizational structure, organizational programs, human resources, stakeholders, policy making and funding aspects that develop as the organization goes.

In Indonesia, Islamic boarding schools are a form of religious-based organization that also carries out humanitarian service programs (Majid, 1997). Law Number 18 of 2019 concerning Pesantren explains in article 43 of the Pesantren law, Pesantren has a function, namely carrying out community empowerment functions oriented to improving the welfare of Pesantren and the community.

Source: BPS (2020)

According to the latest BPS data in 2016, the number of Islamic Boarding Schools in West Java is 8444, Kyai/Ustadz/religious teachers are 58,328, Santri who stay are 416,138, and non-staying students are 341,962. The data can be interpreted that the number of people working in the world of Islamic boarding schools in West Java reaches 758,100 people.

Al Baghdadi Islamic Boarding School is located in Amansari Village, Rengasdengklok District, Karawang Regency, West Java. Inaugurated since 2012 by KH. Junaedi Al Baghdadi or known as Abah Junaedi. The establishment of the Al Baghdadi Islamic Boarding School as an answer that fellow Muslims must work hand in hand with each other for the sake of a better, useful, and beneficial survival. The organizational structure of the Al Baghdadi Islamic Boarding School includes one caregiver and management for the sake of the continuity of the Islamic Boarding School. The Al Baghdadi Islamic Boarding School frees its students from all financing, meaning that the entire life of the Santri is borne by the Islamic Boarding School on the basis of spiritual encouragement. Santri who live in the Al Baghdadi Islamic Boarding School are given full rights to the houses and equipment available at the Islamic Boarding School.

Al Baghdadi Islamic Boarding School's current financial sources are from business units that are being run by the Islamic Boarding School such as the production of Bottled Mineral Water (AMDK), the production of Traditional Herbal Medicines, trading of Islamic boarding school accessories, and businesses engaged in swimming pool tourism. From these business units, the Al Baghdadi Islamic Boarding School gets funding for the sustainability of the institution. While the existing human resources are from students, the community, and also the family of the Al Baghdadi Islamic Boarding School.

Chotimah (2015) explained that Islamic boarding school-based community empowerment is likely to be applied, because Islamic boarding schools have various functions. The functions of Islamic boarding schools include: source of morality, study and emphasis on religious values, agents of change in the field of spiritual and developmental development, mediators who overshadow aspects of life that develop in society, and practice in life. Azra (1997), explored that in the current development of Pesantren, it is hoped that Pesantren will not only use traditional functions, namely “Transmission and teaching of Islamic knowledge, guardians of Islamic traditions, printers of scholars”. Islamic boarding schools must also become places for health education, improvement of targeted technology development for rural communities, environmental rescue centers, and become a barometer of community economic empowerment (Umiarso, 2011). From there, the function of Islamic boarding schools is not only as a place for Islamic thinkers, but Pesantren can also be called an institution that is able to increase human resources, also in the long term as an institution that can empower the community (Agent of development) (Syafe’i, 2017).

Based on relevant research, it can be seen that Margolang (2018) in his research uses elements inherent in community empowerment. First, enabling is to develop a community scope that allows for community potential to be developed. Second, empowering, namely strengthening the capabilities of the community through clear and related actions by providing various inputs and opportunities in various opportunities that will make the community more empowered. Third, protecting, namely the protection and defense of the interests of the weak. The community empowerment approach in essence is to provide encouragement to the decision-making authority of the community based on individual resources, direct, deliberation and social values. Furthermore, with similar research, Latif et al. (2019) explain that community empowerment cannot be separated from the willingness to be entrepreneurial or community entrepreneurs, because according to him, community empowerment in entrepreneurship can be divided into several activities, such as building innovative micro-enterprises, and having medium-sized business potential (MSMEs) that allow them to absorb labor. big ones, like making snacks. Calling on the village community to dare to open a livestock business in groups on pre-determined commodities such as poultry and so on, as well as making it easy to borrow credit from third parties for anyone who needs to advance their business (e.g. community empowerment in the livestock sector). Furthermore, the dimension of community empowerment in which there is economic empowerment. Community economic empowerment in Islamic boarding schools can also customize. In this case, previous researchers Fathoni and Rohim (2019) in their research found that Islamic boarding schools have sufficient resources and capital to serve as the basis for the economic empowerment of the people. With these resources and capital, Pesantren can carry out various economic empowerment activities for the surrounding community. This means that four opportunities for social and economic empowerment can be created. First, employment. Second, business opportunities. Third, establishing Islamic boarding schools and financial institutions. Fourth, student education.

Based on the descriptions of previous research that has been put forward, it can be concluded that as a country where the majority of the population is Muslim, Indonesia has many Islamic boarding schools which in fact are close to aspects of people's lives. Islamic boarding schools as FBOs are also able to carry out one of their functions as change agents in the context of empowering the community as targets of change. The research gap from previous research is that research on the development of the potential of the community and students in an integrated manner has never been done, because the majority of research on empowerment in the Islamic boarding school area places more emphasis on empowerment in the internal or external sector of Islamic boarding schools. With the reasons that have been stated, the novelty of this research is about empowerment in the Pesantren area through the development of the potential of the community and students in an integrated manner so that it becomes interesting to research and study more deeply.

The problem in this research is about developing the potential of students and the community in an integrated manner by the Al Baghdadi Islamic Boarding School. Therefore, the research objectives are to describe and explain the development of students at the Al Baghdadi Islamic Boarding School in order to increase the potential of the community (Internal), to explain the stages and steps of the Al Baghdadi Islamic Boarding School in increasing the community's potential (External), and to explain the outcome of increasing the potential of students and the community.

Pesantren’s Growth and Development

In general, Pesantren grow and develop in villages, so the social activities of Pesantren are based on efforts to build villages that aim to improve the standard and quality of life of the village community (Machdum et al., 2016). Activities and participation of Pesantren who want to take part and build society need new ideas and knowledge. Therefore, Islamic boarding schools with the potential of their human resources and existing infrastructure work hard to become an active part of society, not only providing religious knowledge but also wanting to improve the economic standard of living and wanting to create a harmonious and productive culture for the community.

and the community as the main source of potential development and which emphasizes the material and spiritual welfare of the community as the goal of the potential development process.

Likewise, the results of research conducted by Muttaqin (2016) that the guidance carried out by Pesantren has a relationship with the economic empowerment of the surrounding community. This can be seen from the observations that the community and the Pesantren are united. Society has dependence on Pesantren, and vice versa. On the other hand, the Pesantren will lose assets of up to millions of rupiah, as in the example of agriculture, if the striking farmers do not want to plant, even though the Pesantren can still manage the land they own. However, if this happens, the Pesantren will be penalized because the agreement that has been agreed with the consumer (Supermarkets and others) is not fulfilled. Socially, the relationship between the Pesantren and the community is mutually dependent. In addition, judging from the pattern of people's lives, this activity can reduce the social impact of unemployment.
