Does electronic consent improve the logistics and uptake of hpv vaccination in adolescent girls? A mixed methods theory informed evaluation of an intervention

CURRENT STATUS: POSTED

Tracey Chantler
London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine

✉ tracey.chantler@lshtm.ac.uk Corresponding Author
ORCID: https://orcid.org/0000-0001-7776-7339

Ellen Pringle
Public Health England

Sadie Bell
London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine

Rosie Cooper
University Hospitals of Derby and Burton NHS Foundation Trust

Emily Edmundson
Hounslow and Richmond Community Healthcare NHS Trust

Heidi Nielsen
Hounslow and Richmond Community Healthcare NHS Trust

Sheila Roberts
Hounslow and Richmond Community Healthcare NHS Trust

Michael Edelstein
Public Health England

Sandra Mounier Jack
London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine

DOI: 10.21203/rs.2.24310/v2

SUBJECT AREAS
Health Economics & Outcomes Research

KEYWORDS

Immunisation, consent, evaluation, theory of change, mixed methods research, HPV vaccine, school-based vaccination, adolescence
Abstract
The authors have withdrawn this preprint from Research Square